Custom Bale Wrapper Works Overtime In Wet Weather

DAVE LEFEVER

DENVER (Lancaster Co.) This spring the old advice make hay while the sun shines was true about impossible to follow.

In many areas, including Lancaster County, the persistently rainy weather well into June created a huge challenge for farmers trying to make dry bales.

For those trying to make hay between showers, it sure helped to have a bale wrapper nearby.

Jay Ivan Hoover was prepared to help farmers in the Denver area harvest high-quality forage by offering his services as a custom bale application service.

Jay Ivan has been helping Meurice and Harold Landis and Harold's son Jay Landis with custom work for years, including many are hauling. Custom baling became a bigger focus last year when the Hoovers purchased two major pieces of equipment, a baler for making large square bales and a bale wrapper.

The baler makes three basic sizes of adjustable length. Since the wrapper can handle a maximum bale length of six feet, Hoover has been making all his four-foot bales for wrapping, with a spacing.

For dry hay, he generally aims right for 1,000 pound bales.

According to Hoover, hay for wrapping is best baled when moisture content is between 40 and 50 percent.

It isn't always easy to predict how hay will be according to Hoover. During last year's droughty growing season, he baled a total of just 3,500 bales. Already this year, he's harvested more than 2,000 bales. Because of the wet spring, he's working on a full time wrapping bales for others.

It all depends on the weather, Hoover said of the overall season and for his baling and wrapping services.

He generally keeps his customers satisfied by doing the baling and wrapping as timely as possible.

Occasionally, a breakdown or a big challenge. Hoover said, when they call for help and a delay would make it impossible to keep everybody happy.

We try our best, is said not only as a worked on the wee hours of the morning making hay.

Some night I didn't have a night, he said.

A dry, right foot to 8 bale weighs 600 800 pounds. Hoover said while the six foot long high moisture bales for wrapping weigh about 1,500 pounds.

Hoover also wraps bales for farmers who do their own baling. The in-line wrapper can handle either round or square bales.

Advantages of using square bales include easier storage and transport, according to Hoover.

Hoover charges by the bale for wrapping. For baling he figures on both time and the number of bales. He does custom baling for

Youth Demonstrate Grazing Savvy At Project Grass Contest

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) The most seasoned graziers would be challenged by this contest.

But it was high school students who traveled from all over the state to participate in the first ever Youth Grazing Evaluation Scholarship Contest at Penn State's Haller Farm in State College May 7.

A total of 36 students in 11 teams tested their in depth hands on knowledge of various aspect of grassland management including plant identification, grassland condition, soil types and wildlife management.

Questions such as: Does the grazing systems group with cattle match the seasonal peak nutritional needs of this cattle's stock herd under present management?

What is this a crage growth stage of the dominant forage species and what change should be made in livestock management, plumbed the contestants abilities to assess a plot of pasture.

At the end of the day, a team of 4-H'ers from Cambria County was named the winner of the contest. Each member received $500 college scholarships, and the team received $1,200 toward creating a Springfield Mass. to the National Grazing Contest June 8-11.

The team went on to place second in the county in the 4-H division. The team was awarded a plaque and each individual received a medal. The competed against eight teams from Arkansas, Missouri and Ohio. A team from Missouri won the 4-H contest.

Genevieve Gennis Christ, a member of the winning team, was named outstanding individual in the Penn State contest and received an additional $500 scholarship.

Christ, a high school senior this fall to Forest Hills School District, Cambria County, plans to major in environmental sciences at Penn State. She lives with her parents, Erik and Peggy Christ and two sisters in a beef farm near Vidman.

Cadets Hartels of Edensburg, Marcella Loretto and Matthew Vaneskey of Carrolltown made up the winning team, along with Christ. All four plan to pursue agricultural or environmental careers.

The FFA team from Fayette County took second place in the contest. Members Justin Coffman, Marcy Fencl, Amanda Shaffer and Dustin Sowers each received $500 college scholarships to further their agricultural interests.

The Bedford FFA team from Bedford County placed third. The 50-lbs, 50 foot long dining sites for grassland conditions and wildlife represented typical pasture areas used for livestock grazing and included a meeting with landowners, goals for livestock and wildlife management.

To identify the contestants used aerial soil maps, locate the plot and determine soil types.

For the plant identification part of the contest participants had a total of 50 plants to name, including grasses, legumes, and weed species.

The contest was organized by Pennsylvania Project Grass, the multi agency grazing promotion partnership that recently expanded to include the whole state.

DOYLESTOWN (Bucks Co.) — Teachers had a chance to be the students at this week's Summer Ag Ed Conference, an event conducted Monday through Wednesday here at Delaware Valley College.

Besides attending in-depth sessions to receive lesson plans and research materials, teachers participated in activities that included a trade show and educational exhibits or tours of the college and areas of interest in the Doylestown area.

Representatives of state associations also attended business sessions.

The conference was hosted by Region VI of the National Association of Agriculture Educators (NAAE). Region Six co-hosted the event with the national organization, which is broken up into six regions.

Other state ag education associations, along with the Pennsylvania FFA and Pennsylvania Young Farmer's Association, also participated in the conference.

The conference drew about 300 attendees. Eleven state FFA officers were joined by Del Val students, who also helped at the conference, in addition to 18 presenters. A delegation of 31 county agents and ag teachers from North Carolina, who came for a day to visit Pennsylvania, also participated in the conference.

U.S. Court Upholds Ruling; Beef Act 'Unconstitutional'

MILLIE BUNTING
Market Staff

SIOUX FALLS, S.D. — Strike another blow against the beef checkoff.

On Tuesday, the 8th Circuit (for South Dakota) U.S. Court of Appeals ruled against the Secretary of Agriculture, the Cattlemen's Beef and Research Board, the Nebraska Cattlemen, Inc. and a few individuals, declaring the District Court "did not err in holding that the Beef Act and the Beef Order are unconstitutional and unenforceable."

The Livestock Marketing Association (LMA), the Western Organization of Resource Councils, and several individual beef producers had sued and won a decision last June 2002 that the beef checkoff was unconstitutional on first amendment grounds.

In the ruling Tuesday, the Appeals Court noted that "the government's interest in protecting the welfare of the beef industry and your generator DIDN'T start.

Your power is OFF...
Now your 40,000 Birds or 2,000 Pigs are DEAD.

Top 5 reasons why your generator may overheat and fail this summer...

- Low Coolant level – engine will not cool properly if coolant is below the core.
- Dirty radiator fins – must be free of dirt, dust, feathers, paper, or debris.
- Sufficient air intake – motorized shutters are strongly recommended.
- Improper coolant mix – 50/50 antifreeze and water will ensure max cooling from coolant.
- Faulty exhaust shutters – must open freely with no flow obstructions.

Here are the 5 things we'll do to help you prevent this disaster...

- We'll perform our "Generator Readiness Evaluation" worth $175 for FREE.
- We'll detect your potential problems quickly with our trained technician team.
- We'll dispatch our technician with a service van stocked with the most popular service parts.
- We'll recommend a "Preventative Maintenance Program" that best suits your needs.
- We'll respond to emergences you have 24 hours a day, 7 days a week.

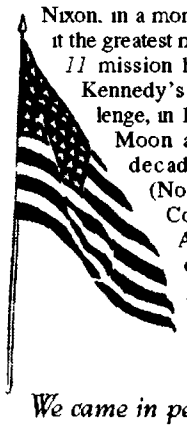
The Old Farmer's Almanac This Week With Almanac

JULY 14–20, 2003

BASTILLE DAY, JULY 14

WHERE WERE YOU?

Where were you on July 20, 1969? Two men, Neil Armstrong and Edwin Aldrin Jr., were walking on the surface of the Moon. President Richard M. Nixon, in a moment of national pride, proclaimed it the greatest moment since Creation. The Apollo 11 mission had answered President John F. Kennedy's earlier State of the Union challenge, in 1961, to safely send a person to the Moon and back before the end of the decade. In the next Apollo landing (November 1969), Charles "Pete" Conrad Jr. referred to Neil Armstrong's statement, "That's one small step for [a] man, one giant leap for mankind," by saying, "Man, that may have been a small step for Neil, but that's a long one for me."



We came in peace for all mankind.

–Apollo 11 plaque left on Moon

The Old Farmer's WEATHER PROVERBS

Beware of an oak, it draws the stroke (lightning); avoid an ash, it counts the flash.

Corn fodder dry and crisp indicates fair weather; but damp and limp, rain.

Centrifugal Evaporative Cooling

- Simple
- Practical
- Economic

The Centrifugal Evaporative Cooling System uses a simple spraying system combined with a reliable fan to atomize water into a super-fine dry vapor that provides the cooling effect. It does not use nozzles, high pressure pumps or compressors. The Centrifugal Cooling Fan can be ceiling mounted or comes in a mobile unit.

OPINION

State Of CWT

Is the strange and loopy program to thwart drastically low milk prices losing ground with producers?

To make the producer self-help program Cooperatives Working Together (CWT) succeed, the National Milk Producers Federation (NMPF) strongly noted that dairy farmers would have to not only cut back production voluntarily, but pay 17.9 cents per each hundredweight of milk sold to make it work.

Last week, the self-help program was cut to less than a third, at 5 cents per hundredweight.

This comes at a time when milk futures are starting to look a lot better, as reported by Penn State. Ken Bailey, professor, noted last week that Class III futures were topping $13 per hundredweight.

Penn State and USDA economists fail to take one thing into consideration: when they were studying Economics 101, there were no Costcos and Wal-Marts.

The market was a lot more diversified then, with a lot more parity in food retailing. Now, large multinational corporations (most didn't exist even 10 years ago) claim a drastically large segment of the consuming public retail dollar.

When will the economists realize their formulas aren't working?

We read in the National Farmers Union (NFU) News this month about "parity." Parity is the price farmers would receive for a product if farm prices had increased at the same rate as expenses. NFU uses 1910-1914 as a base period.

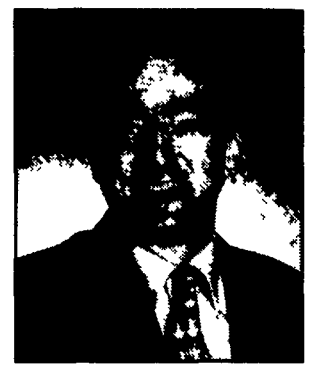
Did you know that, if using parity, milk producers today should be getting about $33 per hundredweight (all categories) rather than $11.10?

It's alarming how much a dairy farmer has to endure.

This brings us to an amusing, sometimes maddening, yet true story.

A few years ago, a Twin Valley FFA member and young farmer spoke to a group of Conrad Weiser elementary school kids. The FFA'er spoke about how a dairy farmer worked 16-hour days, seven days a week. Following the presentation, one of the kids, not from a farm, raised his hand. He had a question: Why would anyone do that?

The teacher, adviser, and kids had to chuckle. We can smile for a while, but you have to appreciate the gutsy stick-to-itness that is part and parcel of a dairy farmer in these trying times.



Now Is The Time

To File Your Crop Insurance Acreage Report

Producers are reminded that they are required to file acreage reports by July 15 for most spring-planted crops. Reports must be filed with both the county office of the Farm Service Agency (FSA) and the crop insurance agent of the producer. It is critical that producers file their reports with each organization by the deadline. Otherwise, you might be without protection this year.

The very wet spring has created an environment that is resulting in crop stress on much of the spring-planted acreage. Therefore, it is important that you follow all of the required steps to make sure that the insured crop acreage is accurately reported on each farm. Be sure to get a copy of your signed acreage report from your agent for your records.

After the normal planting deadlines (6/10 for corn and 6/15 for soybeans), remember that your choices are to file a prevented planting claim or continue planting for up to an additional 25 days, knowing that the protection declines 1 percent per day. Make sure that such acreage is reported for each date that you planted; otherwise the insurance guarantee will be understated, based on the last date that you completed planting.

Acreage of the crop(s) that you were prevented from planting because of adverse weather also needs to be reported separately by farm and by crop, in order to preserve eligibility to file a prevented planting claim.

If you are in this situation, discuss with your agent the requirements to remain eligible for a prevented planting claim and obtain a copy of a notice of damage/loss (for your records) for a prevented planting claim. Find out how soon you can expect an adjuster to visit your farm if you are eligible to file a claim. Make sure that commitment is kept.

To Renovate Strawberry Fields

Conventional strawberry fields can be productive for several years if one renovates them properly. Renovation should begin as soon as possible after harvest is finished.

The first step is to apply 2,4-D (Formula 40) for broadleaf control, if necessary. Wait four to seven days for the weeds to absorb the herbicide. Then mow off the strawberries as close to the ground as possible without damaging the crowns. Next, narrow the rows to 6-12 inches wide with a rototiller or cultivator. Allow one inch of soil to cover the crowns. Fertilize with 40-50 pounds of actual nitrogen per acre and apply phosphorus and potash according to soil test requirements.

A strawberry grower should also apply herbicides for summer weed control as suggested in Penn State's "Commercial Berry Production Pest Management Guide." This guide is available from your county extension office and has a wealth of information for the commercial berry producer.

Sinbar or Devrinol are two preemergent herbicides commonly used for summer weed control. Irrigate to incorporate the fertilizer and herbicide. Late in August, the strawberries will form buds for next years fruit crop. Fertilize again at this time with 20 pounds of actual nitrogen per acre.

To Use Penn State's New Agribusiness Website

Agribusinesses and others with a stake in the food and fiber system have a new place to turn for information on issues affecting the industry, new research, professional development opportunities, and other topics.

"Partners in Progress," which can be found at http://collegerelations.cas.psu.edu, is a Website developed by Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences to provide informational and educational resources for the diverse agribusiness community in Pennsylvania and beyond.

"The site was designed specifically with our business and industry colleagues in mind," said Mary Wirth, director of college relations. "It contains links to pertinent college information and programs and organizes them in a user-friendly format."

Visitors to the site will find links to technical information and programs, fee-based services, research, continuing and extension education, publications, events, international programs, and other offerings.

"Information on biosecurity, drought, food safety, pesticides, and other important topics are just a click away," Wirth said. "Several of the resources found on the site, such as AgMap, offer businesses the opportunity to list their goods and services in searchable databases, linking supply with demand."

For more information on College of Agricultural Sciences programs for business and industry, contact Mary Wirth by phone at (814) 863-9646 or by e-mail at mfw10@psu.edu.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

I CANNOT COME DOWN

Background Scripture:
Nehemiah 6.
Devotional Reading:
Isaiah 49:13-18.

Bennett Cerf tells of a lad named Tommy Noonan who, during his vacation months, carried on a successful lawn-mowing business. One afternoon his mother noticed that Tommy seemed to be taking his own good time in getting started. When she questioned him, he replied, "I'm waiting for them to start themselves. I get most of my work from people who are halfway through."

"Halfway through" is the sad epitaph of many good works. If it is difficult to inspire and challenge people to begin a good work, it is even harder to keep them going until the project is finished. It was this ageless human experience that led Sir Francis Drake to pray: "Lord God, when thou givest to thy servants to endeavor any great matter, grant us also to know that it is not the beginning but the continuing of the same until it be thoroughly finished which yielded the true glory."

Why is it so hard to finish good works? The people of Jerusalem began with a vow, "Let us rise up and build" and we are told "they strengthened their hands for the good work" (2:18b.). Later, in Nehemiah 4, we find that their commitment to the task has not diminished, despite the opposition and threats of their neighbors.

"So we built the wall; and all of the wall was joined together to half its height. For the people had a mind to work" (4:6). "A mind to work" is essential to any commitment.

Enemies Within And Without

Another reason that good works are not finished is that there are fears that distract us from the work. The Jerusalem Jews under Nehemiah had their fill of threats and intimidation. Jerusalem and Judah were surrounded by enemies.

Sanballat was the leader of the Horites who lived in Samaria where once the people of Israel had ruled. Tobiah, on the other hand, was a governor of the Ammonites and he allied himself with Sanballat in opposing the work of Nehemiah. Again and again they tried to trick Nehemiah in meeting them in a place where they could lay an ambush for him.

Their reasons for meeting with Nehemiah sounded reasonable enough, but Nehemiah rebuffed them with these words: "I am doing a great work and I cannot come down. Why should the work stop while I leave it and come down to you?" (46:3).

One of the greatest sermons I have ever heard was preached by Bishop Gerald Kennedy on that text: "I am doing a great work and I cannot come down." That was not only a good retort for Nehemiah to give his enemies, but a principle for us to steer by.

We may not think we can identify with what the Jews felt because their obstacles were living, breathing, scheming enemies without. But there were also, as with us, inner enemies as well. The enemies without — Ammonites, Horites, and others — caused them to experience enemies within — fear, uncertainty, and anxiety. There were probably some people who tried to reason with them to persuade them to give up on this monumental project. They sowed the seeds of doubt.

Your Own 'Great Work'

Make a list of your own enemies, both within and without, who attempt to keep you from finishing your good works. Consider some of the following: poor self-esteem, bad work habits, an unrealizable perfectionism, procrastination, self-indulgence, juvenile rebellion or resistance, super sensitivity to criticism, distraction, resistance to self-discipline — the list goes on and on. Each time any of these appeal to you to give up or slow up or wise up, give them Nehemiah's classic response: "I am doing a great work and I cannot come down."

Yes, rebuilding the walls of Jerusalem was a great work, but not necessarily greater than being a good husband, wife, father, or mother. Just think: When you are tempted to put something else before your commitment to family members, this is a great work and you cannot come down. Maybe it is working with a local boy scout troop, or raising funds for someone in the community whose house has burned down or who is facing surgery for which he or she cannot pay. Lots of voices will ask you to "come down" — but remember, you are doing a great work and you cannot come down.

"We would use slats again if doing it all over!"

Harold Keeney; David, Nancy & Mark Wolfskill

Our original plan was to install scrapers. But after 10 minutes in a slatted barn in Somerset County, we changed our minds. Some people stay away from slats because of the initial cost, but that extra cost is made up for in the first couple years.

The one thing I like the most about slats is that there is no expense. I don't have any scrapers or drive units to maintain. I don't have to run scrapers every day or haul manure like we did in our previous tie stall barn. The cows' foot health has been a lot better, and the cows stay much cleaner. Our milk production is up and the somatic cell count has gone down. I give at least some of the credit to the slats because with less moisture on the floor, there is less bacteria.

-David Wolfskill

"The answer to the most common question is 'No, there is no build-up.' "

East Fluid Milk And Cream Review

Madison, Wis.
July 9, 2003
Report Supplied by USDA

SPOT PRICES OF CLASS II CREAM, dollars per lb butterfat: F.O.B. producing plants: Northeast: 1.4966-1.7007. Delivered Equivalent: Atlanta: 1.5193-1.7234 mostly 1.6327-1.7120.

PRICES OF CONDENSED SKIM, dollars per lb. wet solids, F.O.B. producing plants: Northeast: Class II, includes monthly formula prices: .8500-.9300. Class III, spot prices: .7400-.8200.

SPOTS SHIPMENTS OF GRADE A MILK: FLORIDA: This Week: In 0, Out 60; Last Week In 0, Out 52; Last Week In 0, Out 45. SOUTHEAST STATES: This Week: In 0, Out 0; Last Week In 0, Out 0; Last Week In 0, Out 0.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Due to changes in milk supply agreements, milk import/export totals are not directly comparable to year ago figures and to shipments prior to April 1, 2003.

The following are the June 2003 Class and component prices under the Federal Milk Order pricing system: Class II $10.46 (up $0.03 from May), Class III $9.75 (up $0.04); and Class IV $9.76 (up $0.02). The following are the product price averages used in computing Class prices: butter $1.0797, NDM $0.8040, cheese $1.1464, and dry whey $0.1396. The Class II butterfat price is $1.1646 and the Class III/IV butterfat price is $1.1576.

Many contacts were at or on their way to a large, industry outing at mid-week and unavailable for comment. However, there were still a lot of conversations regarding the recently enacted self-help program proposed and promoted by a large national organization. Although the goals are nearly identical, the final version of the plan has producer costs and resulting benefits sharply lower than the original plans. Nearly all current market indicators point to higher milk prices and lower cow numbers in coming months, which are major goals of the organization's plan.

Milk production is moving lower in most sections of the region. Hot, humid weather prevails over the East. Florida's milk output is declining, but at slower than expected rates. Milk exports from Florida actually increased slightly this week. Milk production in other Southeastern states is dropping rather rapidly as the heat is taking it's toll on the cows. In the Middle Atlantic and Northeast, the milk flow is easing from peak levels. Throughout the region, fat and solids tests are at low, seasonal levels. Bottled milk sales are slower. Bottlers note that sales seem to have really slowed since the Fourth of July. Surplus milk volumes are mostly steady. The slower Class I demand and lower milk output, are combining to keep surplus milk volumes relatively steady.

The condensed skim market is unsettled, particularly for Class III. Recent increases in cheese prices at the CME are expected to greatly impact next month's Class III condensed skim prices. If cheese prices hold through the month, contacts expect August Class III wet solids to be priced over a dollar per pound solids. Reportedly, users are already looking at NDM as a less costly substitute. (Particularly in light of CCC's "powder-for-cheese" program, which may find the exchanged NDM on the market later this month.) There is also concern about Class II condensed skim prices for August.

The fluid cream market remains very firm and prices are increasing. Demand is back to normal levels after a slight lull during the holiday weekend. Multiples are increasing and the CME butter average did jump more than a penny last week. Locally, supplies are often short of needs and suppliers continue to bring in more loads from Midwest and Western producers. Production of ice cream, soft serve mix, and frozen novelties are all at seasonal peaks. The hot weather has given a boost to soft serve and novelty sales. Cream cheese output is steady. Some producers continue to look for more cream, but prices are becoming prohibitive. Bottled cream sales are holding fairly steady. Churning activity is easing as cream supplies tighten.

Oklahoma Feeder Cattle Weekly

Oklahoma City, OK
July 9, 2003
Report Supplied By USDA

OKLAHOMA NATIONAL STOCKYARDS, Weekly Cattle Summary — Compared to last week: Feeder steers and heifers 1.00-3.00 higher. Steer calves over 550 lbs and all heifer calves steady. Steer calves under 550 lbs 2.00-5.00 higher. Demand continues very good for all classes. Feedlot buyers aggressive for light supplies of cattle to fill pen space. Farmers with spring and summer grazing programs have made strong profits on yearling sales and are aggressive for light yearlings and weaned calves to replace the feeders they have sold. Calf sales were highlighted by 3 large strings of reputation bred calves. Cattle industry is thinking on a positive plane with much optimism floating around about August slaughter cattle.

National Feeder Cattle Weekly Review

St. Joseph, Mo.
July 3, 2003
Report Supplied By USDA

NATIONAL FEEDER & STOCKER CATTLE SUMMARY - Week Ending July 3 — NATIONAL FEEDER & STOCKER CATTLE SUMMARY Total Receipts: 249,400; last week 255,400; last year 251,200. Direct: 60,500; last week 78,800; last year 34,800. Video/Internet: 128,000; last week 3,300; last year 152,800. Auctions: 60,900, last week 173,300; last year 63,600. This week's reported auction volume included 52 percent over 600 lbs (with the absence of the Southeastern markets) and 44 percent heifers.

Compared to last week, feeder and stocker cattle sold firm to 3.00 higher on light pre-holiday receipts. Price advances were quoted on both auction and direct sales, after several weeks of country buyers resisting the higher market for current delivery cattle. Southeastern calf markets were not well tested as most auction markets were closed. However, several salebarns in the Plains and the Midwest had decent receipts and demand was very good as reported by the USDA's Livestock Market News Service.

The first week of July not only means fireworks but also that it's time for the Annual Bar-B-Que Yearling Special at the livestock auction in the small northern Missouri town of Green City, population 688. Around 4000 head of top quality 700-900 lb yearling steers and heifers were offered, including 40 truckload lots. There were nearly 1200 head of 800-900 lb steers sold with an average price of 91.47. The jury is still out on whether these prices were provoked by the free lunch, an appearance by the newly crowned World Champion Livestock Auctioneer, or simply demand for these types of cattle. Iowa and Nebraska buyers dominated the bidding, which barely slowed down enough for the local buyers to nip at their heels. Premiums were being paid for home-raised cattle or those that had a verifiable origin. The Midwestern feeders that are paying through the nose for fancy yearlings are not going to get caught with their heads in the sand, should COOL (Country of Origin Labeling) come to fruition. .

Timely precipitation across most of the United States has both crops and pastures looking good, which always turns into demand for feeders and stockers. The fed cattle market rebounded a bit this week, with live sales quoted 1.00 higher at 75.00 and 2.00-3.00 higher in-the-beef at 120.00 dressed. The weather outlook for the metropolitan areas is very good for the long Fourth of July weekend to include beef on the grill. Whether its hot dogs or steaks; have a great Independence Day from all of us at Market News.

PIT POWER
Farmers and composters - Here is a breakdown for compost and manure pits and manure piles! Pit Power is bacteria and bacteria feeders that break down solids in manure pits and septic tanks and breakdown compost faster.
Clean out your pit with ease, use Pit Power! One gallon of Pit Power per 10,000 to 20,000 gal. of pit volume. Should be repeated approx. 2 times a year! If aeration of the pit is possible, it will help the bacteria to grow and work faster to break down solids. Pit Power's purpose is to add life (bacteria) in the manure, which then is returned to the soil where a bacteria is working. The smell of pit manure is not so strong. Pit Power is a non-toxic product - Life to Feed Life!
Price is $58.00 per gallon

STRESS ON THE FARM
Philip E. Wagner
Extension Agent — Dairy
Franklin County

Dairy farmers are a hardy group. They work long hours and endure changeable weather and difficult market conditions. This has been particularly evident the past year. Most farmers and their families readily admit the existence of problems connected with farming but few will admit that these problems create stress.

Farm stress is inevitable, given the condition of farming today. What is not inevitable is the damage stress can do to the health and the emotions of farmers and their families.

For most farmers, stress is not severe enough to cause serious health problems. But for a few, and that number is growing, stress is life threatening. Some farmers display symptoms such as habitual smoking, heavy drinking, irritability, insomnia, fatigue, and restlessness. Stress interferes with their ability to make good judgments, slows their reaction time, and causes them to cut corners. Stress generally makes life miserable and uncomfortable for those around farmers.

Stress is that uncomfortable condition a person experiences when the body creates excess energy to protect itself. This condition is caused by hormones being released into the body and by increased blood pressure, heart and breathing rates, and changes in blood flow. Not all stress is bad. If it weren't for stress none of us could operate. Stress is harmful when it's not controlled or managed.

Stress is like a guitar string. If the string is too tight, it snaps; if it is too slack, it won't work — it won't make music. Farmers need some stress to be alert and productive. If the body adjusts to the stress event, then everything is OK. If the stress results from an unwanted and threatening event, is prolonged, builds up, or too much occurs at one time, the body's defenses weaken and health may be affected.

An Associated Press bulletin states that farmers are second to laborers in the number of deaths from heart and artery diseases, ulcers, and nervous disorders — all connected to unmanaged stress. The National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health ranks farming in the top 10 percent of the 130 most stressful occupations. Farming is one of the 10 most stressful occupations!

These are numerous indicators of stress: accidents, frequent headaches, backaches, other physical symptoms, fatigue, sleep disturbances, recurrent depression, weight gain or loss, negative outlook, increased irritability, impatience, and strained relationships. If you're under too much stress, you can find yourself blaming others for situations, or feel a sense of loneliness, a sense of alienation from others, increased doubts about your competence, low self-esteem, frequent frustration with tasks, and difficulty meeting deadlines and appointments. Strangely, you might also experience an overwhelming urgency of time, an inability to live in the present, a general absence of joy or pleasure in your life, and general unhappiness.

You can do several things that will help you stay alert and handle the stress that builds up. They include getting enough sleep, loafing a little, and working off stress with physical activity. Try to accept what you cannot change, balance work with play, talk out your troubles, and avoid self-medication. Take time to get away from it all. Don't always blame others. Don't let things slide. Take one thing at a time.

Stress is an important and necessary part of life. How we handle it is the question. If we don't deal with it or we deny it is a part of our life, then we may feel the ill-effects of it.

No one can honestly say he or she is immune from stress. Stress can pile up and cause harm. One common result of stress "pileup" is the increased accident rate on the farm. Only you can do something about stress.

Grass, And Nothing But, For Plum Bottom Ayrshires

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

BELLEVILLE (Mifflin Co.) — Scottish ancestry is critical to the success of one major sale that emphasizes dairy animals that benefit a lot from grazing.

John Rodgers' Sixth Annual "Raised To Graze" Sale emphasizes the grazing aspects of Ayrshire animals.

"My blood relatives are from Scotland," noted Rodgers to about 40 visitors to his farm in late April this year.

The visitors — mostly ag lending officers — came along to see what makes a grazing operation successful. While with the grazier, the lenders (part of the 37th annual Pennsylvania Agricultural Credit Conference in University Park) learned about the sale, conducted each August at Rodgers' Plum Bottom Farm.

About 60 head of cattle go on sale on Saturday, Aug. 16 at 12:59 p.m., noted Rodgers. Ayrshire breeders come from Pennsylvania, Maryland, Minnesota, Canada, Iowa - all to see animals grown with grass as the number one, and in Rodgers' case, only feed.

Intensive rotational grazing uses very little equipment. Cost savings make it so successful. In fact, the only equipment Rodgers claims includes a 47-horsepower tractor, a mower, and a manure spreader.

Rodgers has 17 paddocks on 100 acres, all in grazing. The farm feeds about 1 acre per animal per year. Much of the grass is a mixture, including tall fescue, orchardgrass, bluegrass, and white clover.

"I let the cattle harvest them," he said. "I want you to notice the beautiful green grass and red and white clover."

Some fresh and some springing cows are fed nothing but grass. And Rodgers maintains grass-fed Ayrshire beef. Rodgers also rents out some acres and harvests timber on several acres.

He said that selective cuts were harvested on 85 timber acres, and in another 15 years will be cut again.

The sale is the week before Ag Progress Days at Penn State. For those interested, call Rodgers at (717) 935-5242.

National Pork Board Announces Staff Size Reduction

DES MOINES, Iowa — The National Pork Board announced today that it is eliminating 18 staff positions in response to a prolonged slump in hog prices that has reduced revenues from the Pork Checkoff. The layoffs, from a staff of 96, are effective July 15.

"Many hog producers have been losing money over the past 18 months, which has turned out to be one of the most severe dips in the price cycle ever," said Steven D. Murphy, chief executive officer of the National Pork Board.

"Producers have had to take a critical look at their own operations and they expect the same of their Checkoff organization."

Hog producers contribute 40 cents per $100 in sales to the Pork Checkoff each time they market an animal. The National Pork Board uses those funds to help build demand through programs such as the Pork. The Other White Meat advertising campaign; to conduct production and consumer research, and to help consumers incorporate pork into their diets.

The reduction in market prices paid to hog farmers, coupled with a 5-cent reduction in the Pork Checkoff rate approved in 2002, has resulted in a 17.5 percent reduction in the National Pork Board's budget in just two years.

The National Pork Board budget in 2002 was approximately $57 million. The projected 2004 budget is approximately $47 million.

Murphy noted that technology advances, including new Internet tools, are helping the National Pork Board maintain producer programs with fewer full-time staff. "Our commitment to managing programs with producers' Checkoff investments is, if anything, firmer than ever," he said.

"If it weren't, we would not be making these changes. We will strive to work smarter and to continue to seek new ways of doing business that are more efficient, freeing resources for the programs that yield the greatest results for producers."

Grazing, On-Farm Composting Meeting Scheduled In Columbia County

BLOOMSBURG (Columbia Co.) — Penn State Cooperative Extension in the Central Susquehanna Valley has scheduled an on-farm educational meeting for Tuesday, July 15 at the Dan Davis farm in Columbia County. The meeting will begin at 7 p.m.

The farm is a beef cow/calf and commercial hay operation. Davis recently completed pasture improvement practices. Composting has been implemented to utilize manure and poor quality hay bales.

Discussion at the meeting will center on pasture improvement practices, intensive grazing management, and composting systems.

The farm is along Route 339 in southeastern Columbia County. The farm is on the Columbia/Schuylkill County line and is ten miles southeast of Mainville.

Call Dave Hartman at (570) 784-6660 or dwh2@psu.edu for more information.

Raw Milk Sales Still Permitted In Pa.

Ag Comittee Chairman Dispels Rumors

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Rep. Art Hershey (R-13), chairman of the House Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee, issued the following statement in an effort to reassure licensed raw milk sellers that their business is not in jeopardy, and that consumers will continue to be able to purchase raw milk.

"Recent rumors that the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture and the General Assembly are attempting to change the law and regulations with regard to the sale of raw milk are not true," Hershey said.

"Licensed raw milk dealers are permitted to sell milk from their farm, although the law continues to prohibit the sale of raw milk butter, cottage cheese, yogurt, ice cream or other dairy products in the commonwealth due to licensing requirements. I believe that this present policy adequately balances legitimate sanitation, inspection and food safety concerns with certain individual consumer's preference for raw milk.

"As a farmer, and as an individual who understands that some consumers prefer to exercise this choice, I understand the concern over recent rumors and would like to reassure all parties that there is no legislative or regulatory change pending that would affect the sale or purchase of raw milk in Pennsylvania."

by compelling all beef producers and importers to pay for generic beef advertising is not sufficiently substantial to justify the infringement" on producers' First Amendment free speech right.

U.S. Agriculture Secretary Ann Veneman issued the following statement after hearing the decision: "I am disappointed that the U.S. Court Appeals for the 8th Circuit upheld the lower court's ruling that the Beef Checkoff Program is unconstitutional. USDA regards such programs, when properly administered, as effective tools for market enhancement. We are consulting with the U.S. Department of Justice to determine the next steps regarding this matter."

Eric Davis, president of the National Cattlemen's Beef Association (NCBA) and a beef producer from Bruneau, Idaho, said, "We are deeply disappointed in the court's ruling today, but remain committed to our goal of protecting the future of the beef checkoff.

"This ruling is not unexpected," Davis said. "Throughout the lengthy litigation process, we have anticipated that this decision would ultimately need to be made by the U.S. Supreme Court."

"America's beef producers can rest assured," Davis said, "we will see this through to the end. Despite this court's decision, we believe in the merits of our case and in the merits of the beef checkoff. We are confident the checkoff will ultimately prevail."

On Thursday, Lancaster Farming spoke with Paul Slayton, executive director of the Pennsylvania Beef Council. The case could go to the U.S. Supreme Court, and that's "what we expected it to do," Slayton said. The Beef Council, noted the executive director, "is disappointed and surprised at the decision."

Slayton noted that if the checkoff is stopped, other commodity checkoff programs are in jeopardy. The council provides a great deal of educational and promotional programs that also could be in jeopardy.

Slayton noted that all three judges voted against the checkoff, which he said was "alarming." Slayton said the council will know in about 45 days if the case is headed to the Supreme Court. But the court doesn't always agree to hear cases submitted to it.

The Western Organization of Resource Councils' Chairman Shane Kolb, a rancher from Meadow, S.D., said the decision "upholds the rights of independent cattle producers who have been fighting this illegitimate checkoff for years."

Livestock Marketing Association President Billy Perrin said Tuesday the decision affirming that the beef checkoff is unconstitutional and unenforceable, "also affirms all American beef producers' First Amendment, free-speech right."

The 8th Circuit rejected the Cattlemen's Beef Board's assertion that its promotion and advertising programs were "government speech," and thus immune from LMA's first amendment challenge.

The Appeals Court agreed with Federal District Court Judge Charles Kornmann that the beef checkoff is, "in all material respects, identical to the mushroom checkoff," which the U.S. Supreme Court struck down in 2001.

Noting the Appeals Court statement that, based on its findings, "no remaining aspects of the (Beef) Act can survive," Perrin said, "Hopefully, this decision will bring finality to this long-running dispute."

Farmers Union President Dave Frederickson, in response to the Court of Appeals ruling, said, "We are pleased with the decision by the Court of Appeals. NFU supports a voluntary, not mandatory, producer controlled checkoff promotion program of U.S. origin commodities."

It is too soon to think the beef checkoff is finished. There are still many other organizations and individuals assessing the situation.

The many state beef councils who depend on one-half of the checkoff dollar to finance their many successful beef promotions and producer programs are concerned.

Other commodity checkoff groups are considering the repercussions on their programs.

There has been much speculation about the USDA's and the government lawyers' decision to pursue further legal actions on behalf of the beef checkoff. Some have said the case will go all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court. However, some have also commented the Supreme Court would probably refuse to accept the case.

Ohio Agriculture Director Orders Egg Farm To Close

REYNOLDSBURG, Ohio — Ohio Agriculture Director Fred L. Dailey ordered the closure of barns at Buckeye Egg Farm, revoking 12 permits and denying 11 others that allowed the farm to operate. This final action concludes the proposed administrative action Dailey initiated on Aug. 19, 2002, the day he began regulating Ohio's largest livestock and poultry farms under state environmental law.

"Today, I have ordered Buckeye Egg Farm to begin closing their barns within 20 business days," said Dailey. "The pollution and nuisance problems caused by this farm during the last decade were intolerable. The sad legacy of mismanagement of Buckeye Egg Farm is rapidly coming to an end."

A hearing officer upheld Dailey's proposed action after listening to hundreds of hours of testimony on the issue and researching state law.

Dailey ordered Buckeye Egg Farm to begin closing two barns a week starting with the Marseilles facilities in Wyandot County. The next facility ordered closed is the Croton farms in Licking County, beginning with Layer Site No. 2, followed by Layer Site No. 1, the pullet sites, breeder site, hatchery, and remaining layer sites. The third facility ordered closed is the Goshen farm located in Hardin County. The final facility ordered closed is the Mt. Victory barns, also located in Hardin County.

The order states all barn closings should be complete by June 1, 2004, and all manure must be removed no later than September 1, 2004. Closing barns includes removing all birds; cleaning and removing feed from feed bins and feed conveyor lines; and draining all water lines and shutting off all water service. Buckeye Egg Farm may appeal Dailey's final order to the Environmental Review Appeals Commission within 30 days.

"I am disappointed that this closure will likely cost jobs and income for many family farmers and other residents of rural Central Ohio," Dailey said. "This extreme action is warranted after nine contempt citations and a history of significant non-compliance with environmental laws. Most Ohio farmers are good stewards of their land and livestock. Thousands of family farmers and ag-related businesses depend on the success of the state's poultry and livestock farms."

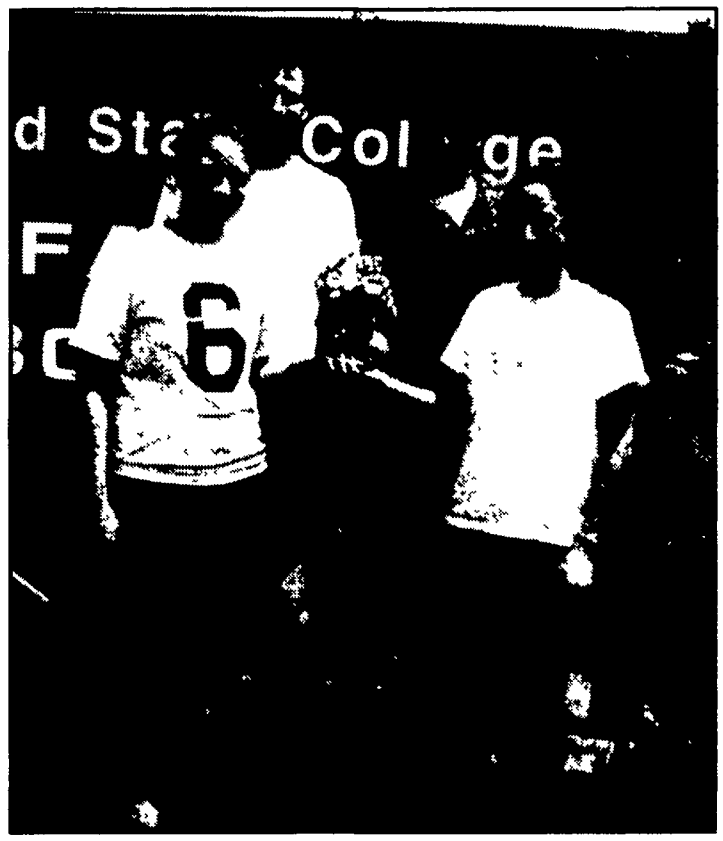
Dailey added: "I am confident this farm's facilities can be assets to their communities if properly managed. If a prospective new owner provides us with a complete, comprehensive plan under the new rules, this department will consider it. So far, we have permit applications from prospective new owners for all of the Buckeye Egg Farm facilities, but none are complete under the law."

Dailey promised to continue the advances made by the department's new program for permitting large livestock and poultry farms. In nearly one year, ODA's Livestock Environmental Permitting Program has issued 17 final permits to install and permits to operate, six draft permits are in or near the public comment phase, and 25 permit applications are in the review process.

The authority to regulate farms with more than 1,000 animal units was given to ODA under S.B. 141, signed into law in December 2000 by Governor Bob Taft. On Aug. 19, 2002, the ODA Livestock Environmental Permitting Program began implementing rules governing construction for all new and existing large livestock and poultry farms; all aspects of manure storage, handling, transportation, and land-application by these farms; the farms' plans for insect and rodent control; and compliance and enforcement procedures.

"We now have one of the most progressive programs in the country for preventing environmental and nuisance problems while fostering jobs and growth for rural Ohio," Dailey said.

FFA Dairy Team Places First



ALFRED, N.Y. — A team of Mifflinburg FFA members recently traveled to here to compete in the Annual Diary Judging Conference at the Farm Laboratory of the State University of New York in Alfred. The team of Ginger Spangler, Joshua Moser, Alicia Spangler, and Troy Martin earned first-place honors in the FFA Division. During the day, each member judged six classes of milking and young cattle from the Holstein, Ayrshire, and Jersey breeds. Besides class placings, they are also scored on their ability to answer questions about the animals once the animals were no longer visible. Following each class, the official judge would give his reasons for the placings and answer questions.

Individually, Ginger Spangler placed second, Josh Moser fourth, Alicia Spangler eighth, and Troy Martin 10th.

Rendell Releases $7.9 Million To Del Val

DOYLESTOWN (Bucks Co.) — Governor Edward G. Rendell was represented by Pennsylvania Secretary of Agriculture Dennis C. Wolff at Delaware Valley College, where the administration announced a grant of $7.9 million to the college.

The grant will be used to complete a new Biotechnology Research Center, to be located at the Doylestown campus. The capital for this project was previously released by former Gov. Schweiker.

"This grant of critical capital development dollars, which will create at least 110 new jobs, is a perfect example of the type of targeted investment we must make as a state if we are going to turn our economy around," said Rendell. "It is absolutely essential that we use the limited funding that we have, especially in the face of a grim fiscal situation, to have the greatest possible impact on the lives of Pennsylvanians. I am certain that this grant will help accomplish that goal."

The development of the Biotechnology Research Center, through a partnership between Delaware Valley College and the Hepatitis B Foundation, will have a significant impact on the local, regional and state economies. The center, which will increase student enrollment and educational opportunities, will work to attract and retain high technology companies and the jobs that accompany such business to Pennsylvania. The college expects that the center will directly create 110 new, high-quality jobs, and approximately 300 jobs including the impact of the center on the local economy. Additionally, the center estimates that the project will generate $14.0 million in state tax revenue over a five-year period.

Biotechnology and other life sciences sectors play a major role in the Pennsylvania economy and the development of this Center will strengthen and enhance the workforce that contributes to these sectors and the economic conditions of this region and state.

On March 25, Gov. Rendell delivered an historic speech to a joint session of the Pennsylvania Legislature in which he outlined his Plan for a New Pennsylvania. The Governor's Plan calls for the reduction of property taxes in each of our state's 501 school districts, unprecedented levels of education funding, and an economic stimulus package that will have an economic impact of greater than $5 billion.

Dairy Beef Quality Assurance Training Seminar July 15

MIDDLETOWN (Dauphin Co.) — A Dairy Beef Quality Assurance (DBQA) training seminar has been scheduled July 15 in Perry County.

Sharing educational information with dairy producers on the subject of beef quality assurance in Pennsylvania is the purpose behind this initiative to certify dairy producers as implementers of best management practices at the farm.

Dairy producer and vice chairman of the Pennsylvania Beef Council, Duane Hertzler of Loysville, is hosting this first in a series of state training programs.

The program will begin at 10 a.m. with a presentation by Dr. Larry Hutchinson of Penn State and Dave Swartz, Perry County dairy extension agent. Lunch will be provided by the BQA Commission and the Pennsylvania Beef Council. After lunch, further presentations and discussions will be about keeping the appropriate records, choosing the right injection site locations and giving injections, and proper drug handling techniques. A necropsy presentation by a Fort Dodge veterinarian will show the damage done to muscle tissue when shots are given inappropriately.

This seminar is open to anyone raising cattle in Pennsylvania, particularly dairy producers. Upon completion of the days events, each producer attending will be certified under the Pennsylvania Beef Quality Assurance Program and will be presented a farm sign and entitlement to the specially designed Pennsylvania BQA blue ear tags associated with the program. The farm sign and signature ear tags symbolize that their program and their production practices meet the standards of the state's guidelines for animal care. As a certified producer, they will join the ranks of more than 900 other top Pennsylvania producers.

Contact the Pennsylvania Beef Council at (717) 939-7000 or the Perry County extension office at (717) 582-5150 for more details or directions to the Duane Hertzler farm.

Longwood Gardens Intern Plants 'Row For The Hungry'

KENNETT SQUARE (Chester Co.) — For 19 years, Longwood has participated in the national campaign sponsored by the Garden Writers Association of America to "Plant a Row for the Hungry." This program asks America's millions of gardeners to plant extra fruits or vegetables, harvest the produce, and give it to local charitable food distributors.

Throughout the growing season, Longwood gardeners pick, wash, and bag ripe produce. One week may yield 20 heads of cabbage and armfuls of lettuce; another week there may be 50 pounds of tomatoes and bushels of green peppers. Longwood donations include over 20 different types of crops ranging from beans, beets, and broccoli to peaches, pears, and plums. Last year, Longwood harvested more than 3,000 pounds of vegetables and fruits from less than a quarter acre. Volunteers with Chester County Cares/ Community Service Council of Chester County pick up the donations and distribute them to needy families. The Council's Gleaners Project coordinates efforts to gather fresh produce from area growers like Longwood and distribute it to the county's hungry.

Gardeners everywhere can help feed the hungry. The first step to joining the "Plant a Row" campaign is to plant an extra row (or more) in the garden or in a window box or container, depending on available space. Crops that travel and store well include broccoli, cabbage, carrots, peas, beans, tomatoes, peppers, squashes, onions, potatoes, and beets. Fruit trees and berry patches are another source for vitamin-packed donations.

The next step is to locate a food bank, soup kitchen, or other charitable food provider that accepts fresh produce. Churches and the "Guide to Human Services" pages in the phone book are good places to start. It's important to find out if, when, and where they accept donations, and what types of produce they like. Some organizations can't handle fresh produce because they lack proper storage, but many are especially grateful for homegrown fruits and vegetables because of the rich nutritional content.

For suggestions, call Community Service Council/Chester County Care (610) 696-4545, contact Delaware (302) 761-9100, or Philabundance (215) 339-0900.

CREP Tree Plantings to Benefit Lebanon County Pasture

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — Those 225 white "birthday candles" dotting a field at the busy intersection of Hill Church and Tunnel Hill Roads north of Cleona are attracting a lot of attention lately. Exactly what are they and why are they scattered over the hillsides of Fay Bowman's cow pasture? That's what everyone wants to know!

There have been plenty of theories. Because they appeared one day in mid-April, some thought the four-foot tall tubes with white net "wicks" on top were part of an Easter celebration. One assumed a vigil was being held, while another wondered what time the Easter sunrise service was going to start. Others thought an orchard or a vineyard was in the making.

The 225 translucent plastic candlelike structures are actually tree shelters for six varieties of hardwood saplings recently planted in the Bowman farm's pasture under the Conservation Reserve Enhancement Program (CREP).

Less visible are the 500 white pine and spruce seedlings, as well as 250 dogwoods and 100 chokeberry shrubs, which were also planted on the 3.4-acre tract. This triangle of newly forested land surrounds the headwaters of a small stream originating in the southeastern section of the larger 10-acre Bowman meadow.

All plantings were done by LandStudies, a Lititz-based ecological firm qualified in CREP riparian buffer installation. An eight-member crew headed by foreman Lorne Bacher completed the entire project in just a little over one working day.

In addition to planting 850 units of bare root stock, their installation of swamp oak, white oak, red maple, sweet gum, green ash, and tulip poplar saplings involved placement of the protective tree shelters to guard against possible damage from rodents or deer; white netting stretched across the tops of the tree shelters offers defense against marauding birds.

Each tree is surrounded at ground level by a sheet of sturdy black plastic anchored by landscape staples to provide long term weed control around the little trees.

Workers are planting trees for conservation in Fay Bowman's pasture.

Evergreen Fence of Lebanon arrived at the scene on April 30 to complete the project. They installed 963 feet of two-strand stream bank fencing powered by a solar charger along the border of the new plantings to prevent the heifers soon to be pastured nearby from damaging the trees and shrubs. An added benefit is that the bovines will no longer be able to walk through the swampy area of this wetlands.

The Bowman family originally learned about CREP from a full-page advertisement in the December 15, 2001 issue of Lancaster Farming newspaper. That led the farm's manager, Sue Bowman, to contact the Lebanon County Farm Service Agency (FSA). It wasn't long before Tim Emenheiser and Charlene Zeigler of the FSA staff met with Sue and outlined the numerous benefits of CREP participation.

In the Bowmans' case, CREP meant further stabilizing a steeply sloped meadow area, creating long-term habitat for wildlife and waterfowl, and improving groundwater quality by keeping pastured cows out of the waterway originating in this field.

Since the existing perimeter fencing around this pasture is frequently the victim of vehicle mishaps, the installation of solar powered fencing around the planting area will also mean less stress from emergency fence repairs along the roadside. Neighbor Joe Meily, who's been pasturing his heifers at the Bowmans for more than ten years, especially appreciated the prospect of fewer late night "rodeos"!

CREP is a federal/state partnership with the goal of enrolling 100,000 acres of highly erodible cropland and pasture in conservation plantings to improve water quality and provide improved wildlife and fisheries habitat.

Participating farmers and landowners must agree to enter into a 10 to 15 year contract, but maintain control of their land with some minimal restrictions. All cropland or marginal pasture within 180 feet of a stream is eligible, as is some highly erodible cropland farther than 180 feet from a stream.

CREP not only pays participants an annual per acre rental payment, but generally the plantings and fencing are fully reimbursable. There are also additional incentive payments to make the program even more attractive. Interested parties should contact their county FSA office.

The Bowman farm, which is owned by E. Fay Bowman and the J. Alfred Bowman Trust, has been in the Bowman family for over 100 years.

In August 2002, this farm was honored during a special ceremony when it became the 6,000th acre of farmland to be preserved by the Lebanon County Agricultural Land Preservation Board.

The Bowmans feel that CREP is a good fit with their preserved farm status and provides a further way for them to be good stewards of their family's legacy.

IS ADDING VALUE FOR ME?

"Value-added production" seems to be a popular buzz phrase in agriculture these days. Many agriculturalists are promoting the benefits of adding value to raw commodities. What does that mean?

Perhaps it is best defined by providing some examples. Value-added could include local processing, packaging, or marketing of any food or fiber product. It could include supplemental activity on the farm, such as a bed and breakfast or hunting/fishing privileges. Or it could include a combination of the products, packaging, and marketing.

So how do you determine if value-added is for you? Even if you have a good idea and product that looks like a natural fit in the existing marketplace, getting into that market is not always easy. Competition in the marketplace needs to be carefully evaluated. If you are new to the market, convincing retailers or customers that you have the ability to deliver a reliable supply of quality goods may be your biggest hurdle to overcome.

Persistence is key to bringing new products into fruition. New product ideas are generally not readily accepted, even though they may eventually have broad appeal to consumers. For example, Coleman Beef of Colorado wanted to market a "natural beef" grown without hormones, feed additives, confinement or vaccinations. Growth of the company was almost nonexistent for the first 15 years and the company didn't operate in the black until the mid-1990s. Today, their beef can be found nationwide. Persistence paid off for them because they identified a product with growth potential and established a solid distribution network for their products by proving they could deliver a consistent supply of quality products.

Penetrating a new market is filled with uncertainty — you don't really know for sure how the consumer is going to respond. Key questions you need to ask include:

- How does my product differ from others in the marketplace?
- How difficult is my identified market to penetrate?
- Have I identified the proper contacts and distribution channels, and how does my product sell with them?
- What is the growth potential of new customers and related products?
- How does my business venture fit in with the community?

All of these questions are important to evaluate when starting a value-added enterprise. It only takes one weak link in the chain to fail. Entering the market takes more than just a competitive price — it also takes a careful assessment of the above mention factors.

If you are interested in value-added production, consider attending Pennsylvania Farm Link's next marketing workshop at Meadow View Farm in Kutztown on Sept. 13 from 9 a.m.-11:30 a.m. Owner James Weaver added value to his farm's fruit and vegetable production by offering jams and jellies made from fruit and peppers grown on his farm. He produces more than 100 varieties of peppers and hot peppers and markets them in part through the farm's annual hot pepper festival that attracts more than 1,000 visitors annually. The farm also offers gifts, crafts, and canned goods. Meadow View Farm is located two miles south of Kutztown on Bowers Road.

Pa. 'Simply Delicious' Sweet Corn Is Coming

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Lancaster County sweet corn grower Fred Funk said "Consumers will need patience this season." While some growers will be harvesting some early "Simply Delicious" Pennsylvania sweet corn soon, many growers say their sweet corn is running at least two weeks behind schedule because of the cool, wet weather this spring.

Few growers were able to plant their corn on a regular schedule this spring. Consequently the supply of sweet corn is likely to be uneven throughout the summer. Assuming summer weather is here to stay, however, Pennsylvanians can expect to enjoy the delightful taste of fresh "Simply Delicious" Pennsylvania sweet corn dripping with butter this summer as usual.

Most growers expect to begin harvesting sweet corn grown without plastic mulch about the third or fourth week of July. Growers who covered their sweet corn with clear plastic mulch that captures the sun's energy and warms the soil by the greenhouse effect are ready to harvest their corn now. The warm moist environment under the clear plastic mulch is ideal for rapid seed germination and seedling development in cool April days. Planting under the plastic mulch represents a greater investment for the grower in terms of time, equipment, and supplies, but enables the grower to hit the early market.

The main challenge for growers this spring was finding fields dry enough to plant between the numerous rainy days. Growers usually aim to plant patches of sweet corn every 7 to 10 days to insure a continuous harvest throughout the season. Since few if any growers were able to maintain a regular planting schedule, most of them may have periods of time in the summer when they have no corn ripe. Growers can compensate somewhat for irregular schedules by planting corn varieties that mature at different times. Weather throughtout the growing season ultimately determines how rapidly each variety grows, so it remains to be seen how even the supply is this summer.

Irrigation has been unnecessary in most parts of the state so far this season, but corn has a critical need for adequate moisture during the period of silking and ear development. For most of the state's corn crop, that period is during July and August when dry conditions often prevail. More and more growers are using trickle irrigation for their sweet corn. With this method of irrigation, a plastic tube with tiny emitters is laid down between every other row of corn. Water, and oftentimes fertilizer, is pumped into the tubes and trickles out to the roots of the sweet corn crop. It is the most water-efficient method of irrigation available.

The key to good sweet corn is freshness. The sugar in sweet corn rapidly begins turning to starch within hours after being harvested. About 40 percent of the sugar can be lost in six hours at room temperature. Refrigeration slows this process, but the sooner corn is eaten after harvesting, the better.

Many growers are growing sugar-enhanced or super-sweet varieties that genetically have more sugar in the kernels. Some of these early sugar-enhanced varieties were developed at Penn State University. Because they have more sugar to begin with, they can be stored for longer periods and still have acceptable sweetness. However, standard sweet corn varieties, when purchased freshly harvested, will still have a delicious, traditional corn flavor, and sweetness.

According to growers across the state, most Pennsylvanians prefer bi-color corn, traditionally known as Butter and Sugar. However, in south central and southeastern Pennsylvania, white is the preferred corn. Certain localities and clienteles still like their corn to be yellow so many growers also grow some yellow varieties.

Regardless of sweet corn color, Pennsylvanians can expect to enjoy an abundant supply each year. It is the leading vegetable crop in the commonwealth with about 22,000 acres grown annually. More than 95 percent of this sweet corn acreage is grown for fresh market sales. As a result, Pennsylvania ranks as the 11th largest fresh-market sweet corn producing state in the nation.

Fresh corn will be available from July into October. About 600 acres of the sweet corn acreage are grown to be processed into frozen, dried, or canned corn products available year around.

June Class I Milk Price

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Milk Marketing Board (MMB) recently announced the prices to be paid to Pennsylvania dairy farmers for June Class I milk (beverage) as an average of $13.69 in the western areas of the commonwealth; and an average of $14.18 in the central and eastern areas of the commonwealth. These prices include the over-order premium of $1.55 per one hundred pounds of milk.

Farmers, whose milk production is pooled under a federal order, will receive a market-wide blend price based upon the value of all classes of milk. However, the blend price received will vary as the component composition of a farmer's milk differs from the established benchmarks of 3.5 percent butterfat, 2.99 percent protein, and 5.69 percent other solids.

'Small Farms Boosters' On The Rise

ITHACA, N.Y. —The tremendous ingenuity, creativity and sheer persistence of small-scale farmers has become apparent, especially in the last couple of decades, and we're beginning to realize that there are lots of ways farmers can "Stay Small and Stay In." And there are lots of ways beginning farmers can "Go Small and Get In." Small farms are here to stay.

Fifty-three different extension projects have been funded in the last three years by The Cornell Cooperative (CCE) Extension Grants Program for Innovative Small Farms Education, for a total of $131,610.

Recently a group of Cornell Cooperative Extension "Small Farms Boosters" met at Hartwick College in Oneonta, N.Y., to share ideas about how to strengthen their educational programming for smaller farms. Sponsored by Cornell's Small Farms Task Group, the meeting featured a presentation and discussion with Dr. John Ikerd, professor emeritus of agricultural economics at the University of Missouri.

Ikerd has written extensively about small farms and sustainable agriculture, arguing that small farms, not large industrialized farms, are the future for agriculture in most rural communities. The paper he presented at the CCE retreat can be viewed at www.smallfarms.cornell.edu. Click on "About Small Farms," and then click on "Contributions of Small Farms."

"Our purpose was to gather a small group of highly dedicated extension educators — people who are enthusiastic about small farms and have a lot of experience working with them," said Joanna Green, extension associate with Cornell's Small Farms Program. "The discussion was part of our ongoing effort to strengthen Cornell's support for small farms".

The Cornell Small Farms Task Group has developed a set of suggestions for extension program planning for small farms. To view the recommendations, go to www.smallfarms.cornell.edu. Click on "Working With Small Farms", then click on "Educational Programming."

Alternatives To Burning, Burying, Dumping Ag Plastics

ITHACA, N.Y. — Recycling Agricultural Plastics in New York State is a new 30-page report about recycling options for agricultural plastics. It addresses concerns about the environmental health effects and other liabilities of burning, burying, or dumping plastic wastes on farms by describing off-farm recycling and re-processing alternatives.

Plastics are being used increasingly in all sectors of agriculture. Plastic products are being substituted for the longer lasting materials previously used because they often cost less and improve production efficiency For example, plastic silage bags can result in better feed quality.

However, as with many throw-away products, disposal is a problem. Surveys indicate that more than half the agricultural plastics in New York state are disposed of by open burning, which releases high levels of polluting emissions. Most of the remainder is buried or dumped on-farm. Emissions from open burning are much greater than from controlled incineration and these emissions pose risks to human health.

Recycling Agricultural Plastics in New York State identifies major uses of plastics on New York farms; recycling technologies that are currently viable or that may be realistic in the near future; technical and infrastructural issues; and processes, agencies, and individuals involved. It addresses concerns of the agricultural, environmental protection, public health, and economic development communities.

The report was written by Lois Levitan and Ana Barros of Cornell University's Environmental Risk Analysis Program. The full report, summary, references, and a photo gallery of agricultural plastic uses and recycling equipment is posted to the Website of the Cornell Environmental Risk Analysis Program: http://www.cfe.cornell.edu/erap/C&ER. Or call (607) 255-4765 to order a print copy.

Survey Will Help Penn State Target Needs Of Custom Operators

UNIVERSITY PARK (State College) — Custom agricultural operators are invited to take part in a new online survey designed to help Penn State Extension better serve their needs.

"This is the custom operators' opportunity to be heard," explained Sarah Roth, Extension associate in business management with the Dairy Alliance, a program of Penn State's College of Agriculture.

A custom agricultural operator is defined as any individual or business hired to perform one or more activities necessary for the function of a farm.

"The survey is really an attempt to assess the needs of custom operators across the state, and see how we can better serve them," said Roth. The short online survey can be found on Penn State's Farm Management website at http://farmmanagement.aers.psu.edu. The survey features eight questions that probe how custom operators are currently getting information about topics such as marketing, financial planning, or business organization; what types of information they need to improve their productivity; and how they would like to receive that information in the future.

Data collected from the survey will aid in creating new programming that addresses the specific needs of custom operators, one of the fastest growing segments of Pennsylvania's vast agriculture industry. According to Roth, this programming may take the form of a series of regional workshops that address topics of interest to operators.

The survey follows on the heels of the creation of a custom operator database, also found on Penn State's Farm Management website.

"The database is a wonderful means to link operators with producers," explained Roth. "Operators from across Pennsylvania can use it as a marketing tool to raise awareness about the services they provide, and producers can use it to access a variety of resources from someone to harvest their silage to a place to house dry cows."

For more information about Penn State Farm Management services, contact Roth at (814) 863-8645, or via e-mail at: SarahRoth@psu.edu.

Cattlemen's 2003 Field Day Planned For Elizabethtown Area

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — The Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association, Pennsylvania Angus Association, Cyagra, Inc., and the Pennsylvania Grazing Lands Coalition will team up to sponsor a field day in conjunction with Cyagra, at the EmTran facilities, located at 190 Bossler Road, Elizabethtown, on Saturday, July 19.

A tour of the Dwight Hess Feedlot at Marietta will also take place after the events planned for the Cyagra (EmTran) facilities.

The program will begin with registration at 9 a.m., and a wide array of different types of reproductive technologies, plus marketing and management considerations will be discussed from 9:30 a.m. until about 3 p.m.

There will be two sets of seminars, one on reproductive technologies, and one on marketing and management of beef cattle enterprises. Both seminars will be repeated in the morning and in the afternoon.

Among the new reproductive technologies to be discussed are artificial insemination enhancement through new methods of identifying estrus, embryo transfer, and cloning and genetic preservation.

The marketing and management seminar will include discussions about branded beef programs, selecting genetics for low-input grassland farming, and utilization of by-products as feeds in finishing beef cattle diets.

Throughout the entire day there will be discussions on stream bank fencing, with a nearly completed project serving as a demonstration and the primary focal point for discussion about the benefits and methods of similar programs.

There will also be commercial exhibits for cattlemen and others attending the field day to observe. A special speaker at the noon luncheon will be Don Coover, SEK Genetics, Kansas, talking about the marketing, breeding and other beef cattle industry benefits from cloning of animals.

At 3 p.m. the field day attendees will have an opportunity to tour the beef cattle feedlot owned and operated by Dwight Hess at Marietta. The Hess feedlot has fed cattle for many years, and utilizes some of the most modern methods of formulating and feeding least-cost rations to finishing beef cattle.

The feedlot also has state-of-the-art animal waste disposal and utilization systems.

A special presentation by consultants from Agri-Basics, Inc. will be made during the morning and afternoon seminars, and will also be available at the Hess feedlot.

According to Terry L. Shearer, president of the Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association, "It is difficult to plan a field day program, or any other educational event, that has something for everybody. However, this program, this year, appears to provide information for essentially all the different segments of the beef industry from the purebred breeder, to the commercial cow-calf operator, through feedlot operators and even on through the packer, processor and the ultimate consumer."

There will be a noon lunch available, courtesy of the co-sponsors and the hosts.

More information about the field day arrangements can be obtained by calling the Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association (phone/fax: (814) 238-5888) or by emailing llw@psu.edu. The PCA website (www.pacattle.org) will also have more details about the field day.

N.Y. Organic Crops And Soils Field Day Set

GENEVA, N.Y. — Tom Frantzen, organic farmer from Alta Vista, Iowa will be the keynote speaker in the morning session of the Second New York Organic Crops and Soils Field Day scheduled for Tuesday, Aug. 12.

Frantzen's operation includes about 335 crop acres, 75 beef cows, and 100 sows. He markets his pork through Organic Valley, a Wisconsin-based cooperative with more than 460 farmer-members in 17 states. Frantzen's farm has been organic since 1995.

The field day is sponsored by New York Certified Organic (NYCO), the Northeast Organic Farming Association of New York (NOFA-NY), the North-East Organic Network (NEON), and Cornell Cooperative Extension.

"What we are managing with biology is pretty complex. Farming is vastly more complicated now than it was 20 years ago. Organic farming has given us a better quality of life, though, and should give us a more stable future in an unstable agricultural industry. I enjoy what I'm doing, and I enjoy the people I work with immensely," Frantzen was quoted as saying on the New Farm Website (www.newfarm.org).

Weed management, soil health, organic grain markets and the beneficial connections between livestock and crop production will be the primary topics of this field day. Organic field crop and dairy/livestock farmers and researchers from the Finger Lakes of New York and other regions will share their expertise in roundtable discussions, presentations, and farm field stops. An afternoon bus tour will include demonstrations on soil health, weed management, and other areas of interest to grain, dairy, and livestock farmers.

The field day will run from 9:30 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. The morning session will begin at Jordan Hall, New York State Agricultural Experiment Station, Geneva, N.Y.

Pre-registration and payment are required. Lunch is included. Fee is $25 per person, $15 per person for additional participants from the same farm. Please contact Maxine Welcome at (607) 255-5439 for more information.

Season's First Commercial Plum Pox Reported In State

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The first positive test for the Plum Pox Virus (PPV) this season has been confirmed in a commercial block of stone fruit trees in Adams County, according to an announcement Monday by Agriculture Secretary Dennis C Wolff.

Wolff said the administration and the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture (PDA) remain strongly committed to the Plum Pox Eradication Program.

"Pennsylvania currently is one of the country's top ten stone fruit producing states, and we want to maintain, if not improve, the ranking," Wolff said. "Although our staff is disappointed in finding even a single infected commercial tree, this in no way will diminish our resolve to eradicate the virus and allow our hard-working growers the opportunity to once again plant stone fruit trees."

This positive tree was found in an already quarantined area. When a tree tests positive for PPV, PDA establishes a 500-meter buffer zone around the infected tree or block of trees. All stone fruit trees within the zone must be removed and destroyed.

In 2002, less than a dozen acres of commercial trees tested positive for PPV. In fact, there has been a drastic decrease in the amount of stone fruit acreage infected with PPV after its initial detection in Pennsylvania in the fall of 1999.

PDA and USDA surveyors will continue to visit commercial stone fruit orchards in the four-county PPV quarantine area and adjacent counties. Visits are also continuing on homeowner properties in and near the quarantine area.

Penn State Participates In ADSA Meetings

PHOENIX, Ariz. — Eleven Penn State Dairy Science Club members traveled to Phoenix, Arizona to participate in the June 2003 American Dairy Science Association-Student Affiliate Division (SAD) meetings.

These meetings bring together universities from across the nation to share ideas and fellowship.

The club returned to Penn State with many honors. Penn State's quiz bowl team placed first for the third consecutive year. This year's members included Meghan Moody, Hayley Springer, Daryl Maulfair, and Joshua Hushon.

The club scrapbook prepared by Lauren King placed first, and the Dairyman yearbook edited by Maribeth Ozog and James Neyhard placed second.

Josh Hushon, Airville, won first prize in the production division of the undergraduate presentation competition with his talk, "Crossbreeding — Why Now?"

Also presenting in the contest were Joel Krall with "Dairy Case Wars — Got Milk vs. Not Milk?" and Hayley Springer with "Effect of Prepartum Dietary Carbohydrate Source and Monensin on Postpartum Immune Function."

The club ranked second in the Outstanding Chapter contest, and Jessica Worobey was elected first Vice-President of the Student Affiliate Division for the upcoming year.

Penn State also placed first in the Centennial Celebration proposal contest.

Other Penn State undergraduate students attending the meetings included Amanda Silsby, Kim Matson, Sarrah Biddle, and Marc Sholder.

Cambria County Hosts Log-To-Lumber Workshop

GALLITZEN (Cambria Co.) — Rainy weather didn't dampen the enthusiasm of more than 40 people at a recent Log-to-Lumber workshop at Gallitzin State Park.

The workshop was co-sponsored by the Woodland Owners of the Southern Alleghenies, (WOSA) the Bureau of Forestry and Penn State Extension.

Loggers, sawyers, woodworkers and woodlot owners were exposed to various methods of cutting logs from plane sawing to quarter sawing, application to plane and quarter sawing in cabinetry, how to stack lumber for air drying, the benefits of sealing the ends of logs before cutting, various uses of other parts of a tree, veneering, and watched a demonstration of cutting logs by woodworker and bandsaw mill owner George Radeschi of Bedford.

Following the demonstration, with 23 years of experience in the forest products industry, Dan Snyder of the Department of Conservation of Natural Resources talked about bucking and the application of circular mill sawing.

Snyder and service forester Dave Scamardella of the Bureau of Forestry gave a presentation about lumber grading.

"This workshop filled a need to help people understand the importance of the efficient use of forest products and the value of sustainable forestry," said John Herr, president of WOSA.

National Plan For Agricultural Safety Research Announced

AMES, Iowa — The culmination of two years work by agricultural safety specialists from across the country has resulted in the recently released "The National Agenda for Action, National Land Grant Research and Extension Agenda for Agricultural Safety and Health."

The report outlines the 12 key areas where land grant institutions and agricultural experiment stations should focus future safety research. It was created by the NCR-197 Committee on Agricultural Safe Health Research and Extension.

The group's members come from 18 land grant institutions, the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA), and the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health (NIOSH).

Charles V. Schwab, associate professor, Ag and Biosystems Engineering, Iowa State University and chair, NCR-197 committee, said "This historical document marks the first published national agricultural safety and health agenda for action by the land grant system since 1943, when the first cooperative extension specialist for safety was appointed in Wisconsin."

Agricultural production in the U.S. has historically been recognized as one of the most hazardous of all industrial categories. Most other industries have benefited from enhanced workplace safety and expanded workplace safety regulations. However, farms and ranches have experienced little reduction in the rate of workplace deaths and injuries over the past decade.

The fatality rate for agricultural workers is estimated to more than six times that of other industries (22.5 per 100,000 versus 3.8 per 100,000). Currently an average of 740 people lose their lives and another 130,000 workers are temporarily or permanently disabled each year doing farm and ranch work.

About 75 percent of farm-related fatalities involve tractors and machinery, with the single most significant cause of death being tractor overturns. The remaining workplace fatalities are distributed over a wide variety of causes ranging from livestock-related injuries to suffocation in flowing material.

In addition, farm and ranch families face increased hazards of rural transportation and the intersection of work, recreation, and home that results in broad exposure to workplace hazards that don't exist in most other industries.

The entire report may be found at the following Web address: http://www.tmvc.iastate.edu/NCR197.

Hempt Cup Polo Match Rescheduled to August 16

MECHANICSBURG (Cumberland Co.) — Harrisburg Opera's biggest annual fundraiser, the Hempt Cup Polo Classic, will take place Saturday, August 16 at Hempt Field, Carlisle Pike, Mechanicsburg.

Originally planned for June 14, the event was rescheduled after vandalism and the wet weather made the field unplayable.

Also new is a tailgating competition open to all, with celebrity judges and prizes for the most original theme, most elegant tailgate, best pavilion, and best hat.

The day opens with canine relay races featuring the Jetset Flyball Dogs. Flyball features relay teams of four dogs that race over hurdles, jump on a spring-loaded box which releases a tennis ball, catch the ball and race back to start.

The day continues with the start of the Hempt Cup Polo Classic, which pits the West Shore Polo Club team against the visiting Lancaster Polo Club. In polo, teams of four mounted players hit a hard white ball 3½-inches in diameter with 4½-foot long mallets from the backs of their 1,000 pound thoroughbreds, while galloping 20 to 35 miles an hour. The goal is to score by hitting the ball between the uprights at each end of the field, which is the size of ten football fields. Defensive plays include hooking an opposing player's mallet, bumping a player's galloping horse at up to a 45 degree angle with one's own, and "riding off," or pushing a player's horse off the line of the ball with one's own mount.

Audience participation continues at halftime. Rodney Owens, "The Celtic Piper," will provide bagpipe music for the traditional halftime divot stomp. The divot stomp gives spectators an opportunity to help maintain safe field conditions for players and ponies.

The gates open at 1 p.m. and the match begins at 3 p.m.

Fieldside patron parking spaces, including reserved sideline parking for one vehicle, four chairs, and four adult admissions, cost $100. VIP admission including admission to the VIP tent, food, drink, and parking is $30. General admission is $10. Admission for children under age 12 and general admission parking is free. To reserve a sponsor or patron space, or for more information, phone (717) 506-2203.

Final Rule Issued On Common Crop Insurance Basic Provisions

WASHINGTON, D.C. — USDA's Risk Management Agency (RMA) last week announced the Common Crop Insurance Policy (Basic Provisions) final rule in accordance with the Agriculture Risk Protection Act of 2000 (ARPA).

The Basic Provisions were recently published in the Federal Register and are effective for the 2004 crop year for crops with a contract change date of June 30, 2003, and later.

"ARPA charged the USDA and RMA to enhance the Federal crop insurance program to better serve our nation's agricultural producers," said Administrator Ross J. Davidson Jr. "RMA looks forward to working diligently with the insurance companies in accomplishing this goal and implementing these new rules."

The Basic Provisions provide general policy terms and conditions applicable to most crops insured under the Federal crop insurance program. These are used in conjunction with specific crop provisions to provide producers with insurance coverage for their agricultural commodities. To comply with ARPA mandates, RMA made changes to select terms and conditions in the Basic Provisions. For example, the final rule includes limits on multiple insurance benefits on the same acreage in the same crop year; allows a second crop to be planted on acreage where a first crop was prevented from being planted; and adds an informal review process for determinations regarding "good farming practices."

A number of additional changes to the Basic Provision were proposed, but not carried forward in this final rule. These proposed changes will be addressed in a subsequent final rule and will not be effective until the 2005 crop year.

Interested producers should contact their agent regarding the Common Crop Insurance Policy Basic Provisions. A list of crop insurance agents is available at local Farm Service Agency offices or by using RMA's Agent Locator at: http://www3.rma.usda.gov/tools/agents/.

No-Till Farming Methods Catching On Among Amish

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

GAP (Lancaster Co.) — More Amish farmers are taking an interest in no-till farming. That's evident from the big crowd that visited the David F. Stoltzfus farm for a no-till field day this past Tuesday.

A total of 120 guests attended the third annual field day. They had a chance to hear stories and see first-hand examples of how using horse-drawn no-till planters can save many hours of labor, conserve moisture, prevent erosion, and help build up soil structure over the years.

Stoltzfus first began trying no-till methods eight years ago. Since then, he's switched entirely to no-till planting for his 70 acres of corn and alfalfa crops on the farm.

His father Gideon and several brothers manufacture and adapt a variety of planters at their nearby business shop.

Stoltzfus said the main reason he began no-tilling was to better deal with the red clay soil found in some of his fields. The dense, poorly-drained clay makes it tough to plow and work the soil.

But no-tilling can be an advantage for all soil types, according to crop specialists at the meeting. During this wet spring, for example, no-till farmers were often able to get their crops planted sooner than those who plowed.

"A lot of people found out no-tilling was good this year. They didn't have time to plow," said Bob Anderson, Penn State crop agent in Lancaster County.

Anderson pointed out that planting corn by conventional tillage (plowing, discing, harrowing, and planting) takes at least six times as long as no-tilling, which involves only one pass across the field with a no-till planter.

"I find the interest (in no-till) is growing," said David Stoltzfus. Some of the reasons for this, he said, are because some Amish dairies are growing larger and labor is not as readily available as it used to be.

Grant Troop, an agronomist from Quarryville, spoke on some of the basics of no-till planting, including planter parts and adjustments.

The best way of transitioning to no-till corn is by planting into an alfalfa field, according to Troop. After four years of not being tilled, soil in an alfalfa field "has structure back in it," he said.

"Year after year of plowing compromises soil structure," Troop pointed out.

Visitors had a chance to examine one of Stoltzfus's corn fields he no-tilled planted this spring in fairly wet conditions. Troop and Stoltzfus said they were concerned about how the corn would grow because of the risk of "sidewall compaction" that can happen when corn is planted in wet soil, Troop said.

This kind of compaction is caused by hardening of "sidewalls" created by the no-till coulters in the soil. If the corn roots cannot break through these walls, they will only grow in a single plane along the planting groove, greatly reducing yields.

Troop and Stoltzfus said they were pleased with how well the corn was growing. This is the second year the field was planted to no-till corn. Prior to that it had been in alfalfa.

Troop attributed the good-growing corn to the fact that the field had not been tilled for several years.

Sjoerd Duiker, Penn State soil scientist, pulled up several corn stalks to show the root development. The roots showed some evidence of sidewall compaction, but not to the extent of causing large yield losses.

Duiker also had soil samples on hand for farmers to see the difference between soils that have been no-tilled over the years and soils that have been tilled. Better structure and fewer signs of compaction could be seen in the no-till soils.

As far as no-tiller planter adjustment, Troop stressed the importance of making sure the planter is level to get the best planting job.

"If you don't have the corn planter level, it's not going to do the job you want it to do," he said.

Troop also went over recommendations on various planter parts. Generally, 13-wave coulters work best for planting corn, he said. They should not be mounted on the planter frame, but mounted so that depth wheels can give direct depth control.

Other Penn State personnel on hand for the day included Greg Roth, professor of crop management; David Sylvia, head of the Department of Crop and Soil Sciences; and Mark Goodson, York County crop agent and organizer of the field day.

Farmers attending the field day were eligible to receive chemical application credits.

Interested farmers gather around a corn planter on the farm of Gideon and David F. Stoltzfus farm, as Grant Troop goes over some of the essentials of good no-till methods. In the background is a field of no-till corn.

Sjoerd Duiker shows corn roots taken from a field that has been no-tilled for several years on the Stoltzfus farm. Although this corn was planted in fairly wet conditions and the soil shows some evidence of sidewall compaction, the crop is growing pretty well.

Grant Troop demonstrates the importance of keeping the no-till planter level in order to get a good planting job.

10 Tips For Improving No-Till Success

Greg Roth
Penn State Professor
Crop and Soil Sciences

Growing no-till corn successfully can be a challenge sometimes, but many new innovations that have come along during the last 10 years and our increased understanding of no-till corn are making the practice something more farmers should consider.

I have had the opportunity to visit and get to know many successful no-till farmers and also to plant no-till corn for the last 14 years in my research trials. This has given me a good appreciation for both the potential problems as well as some of the key issues to consider in growing no-till corn. I've put together a short list of things to consider for being successful growing no-till corn:

• Plan a system for no-till success. Most successful no-till farmers have developed some sort of system that they use to help make no-till successful. This usually involves a rotation with different crops and some system for manure management. By planning ahead they can make decisions on varieties and management practices that help to contribute to successful no-till production.

• Stick with it. Most farmers and crop consultants tell me it takes 4-5 years before they really see no-till soils develop that are easier to manage. Typically, this results from increased organic matter levels in the soil surface and better structure and less potential for soil compaction.

• Pay attention to your planter. No-till is much less forgiving than tilled systems to a planter that is not adjusted properly or that has some worn parts and is not placing the seeds at a consistent depth and spacing in the row. Shoot for a seeding depth of 1.5 to 2 inches deep.

• Be diligent about weed control. Since you are not using tillage to control weeds, often the potential weed pressure will be higher. Over the long term, mediocre weed control can lead to the development of perennial weed problems and heavy annual weed pressure, making control difficult. New herbicides and Roundup Ready crops make this problem a lot easier.

• Consider your soils and plan accordingly. Different soils lend themselves to no-tilling differently and require different tactics. Wet soils dry out slowly and often require zone tillage. Deep soils result in heavy crops with lots of residue. Shallower, rocky, soils are ideal candidates for no-till.

• Select hybrids that are adapted to no-till and your system. High yield potential, good disease tolerance, and good early season growth are factors to consider. Consider Bt hybrids on double crop corn and Roundup Ready hybrids where weed control is challenging or expensive. Don't push maturity on hybrids — this may delay harvesting and promote more compaction. Pay attention to refuge requirements.

• Consider row cleaners. Row cleaners are particularly useful where you have lots of corn stalks, soybean residue, or manure that can interfere with good seed-to-soil contact. Avoid using them in standing green rye or other cereal crop residues.

• Be prepared to plant when the soil is fit. Try not to plant when soils are too wet. Often this leads to problems. When soils are fit, be ready to plant as much as possible. Many no-tillers are successfully planting very early when soil conditions are right in an effort to extend the planting window.

• Consider using a starter fertilizer. On higher fertility soils, I have had success with higher N starter fertilizers to increase the N availability early in the season. Some growers put UAN or urea at planting 4 inches off the row and then skip the starter or add some pop-up at 3-5 gallons/acre on the seed.

• Take advantage of the labor savings. For many no-tillers, the advantage is not in higher yields, but the ability to devote more time to other activities. This could include cropping more acres, attending to livestock, or working at another job.

CWT Program Begins

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Starting this month, participating dairy farmers will have 5 cents per hundredweight taken off their milk checks toward the national Cooperatives Working Together (CWT) program.

The down-scaled program was "officially launched" at a National Milk Producers Federation (NMPF) board of directors meeting July 8, according to Shahnna Williams, NMPF executive secretary.

NMPF officials reported July 3 that they had reached their goal of having 70 percent of the nation's milk supply in the program.

The proposed assessment was recently lowered from 17.9 to 5 cents per hundredweight after a number of farmers and independent cooperatives voiced significant resistance to the one-year program designed to raise farm milk prices across the country.

Alan Wagner, editor of the USDA's Fluid Milk and Cream Review, said in his July 2 report that "sharply higher cheese prices, lower cow numbers, and below year-ago milk output" have been cited as reasons for the failure of the original program.

Ken Bailey, Penn State dairy economist, has been reporting that overall dairy markets are improving. In his June 27 report, Bailey wrote that Chicago Mercantile Exchange Class III milk futures peaked at $13 per hundredweight in September/October.

Herd buyouts, production cutback incentives, and export price assistance make up CWT's three-legged proposal to raise milk prices.

Most of the buyout and reduction incentives are targeted to western and southwestern states.

The new CWT proposal will use the proceeds from the 5-cent per hundredweight assessment to reduce milk supplies by a projected 1.2 billion pounds over the next 12 months. According to the NMPF, that should boost all-milk prices by an average of 23 cents per hundredweight.

The assessment will be taken from milk produced beginning July 1, according to Williams of NMPF.

Farmers/members of participating cooperatives, including Dairy Farmers of America and Land O' Lakes, will have the 5 cents/hundredweight automatically removed from their checks.

Independent farmers and members of independent co-ops who want to participate, however, need to sign up. Sign-up forms for these producers will be send out by the end of July, said Williams.

Animal Health Safeguards Crucial For Expanding Trade

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Protection of the U.S. cattle herd is a top priority for the National Cattlemen's Beef Association (NCBA), and very important in considering expanded trade both imports and exports.

Cattle producers are looking to USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS) and Food Safety Inspection Service (FSIS) to ensure appropriate safeguards are met to prevent the introduction or spread of foreign animal diseases.

In comments filed recently with APHIS on the proposed rule regarding importation of beef from Uruguay, NCBA said trading partners must share our "values of honesty, integrity and compliance with U.S. and international standards for animal health and food safety."

FSA Farm Loans For Socially Disadvantaged Persons

YORK (York Co.) — The Farm Service Agency (FSA) can make and guarantee loans to socially disadvantaged applicants to buy and operate family-size farms and ranches. Funds specifically for these loans are reserved each year.

A socially-disadvantaged farmer is one, of a group, whose members have been subjected to racial, ethnic, or gender prejudice because of the identity as members of the group without regard to their individual qualities. For purposes of this program, socially disadvantaged groups are women, African Americas, American Indians, Alaskan Natives, Hispanics, Asians, and Pacific Islanders.

Direct Loans are made to applicants by FSA and include both farm operating and farm ownership loans.

Guaranteed Loans also may be made for ownership or operating purposes, and may be made by any lending institution subject to Federal or State supervision (banks, savings and loans, insurance companies, and units of the Farm Credit system). Typically, FSA guarantees 90 or 95 percent of a loan against any loss that might be incurred if the loan fails.

Farm Ownership Loan funds may be used to purchase or enlarge a farm, purchase easements or rights of way needed in the farm's operation, erect or improve buildings such as a dwelling or barn, promote soil and water conservation and development, and pay closing costs.

Farm Operating Loan funds may be used to purchase livestock, poultry, farm and home equipment, feed, seed, fuel, fertilizer, chemicals, hail and other crop insurance, food, clothing, medical care, and hired labor. Funds also may be used to install or improve water systems for home use, livestock or irrigation, and other improvements.

Persons who think they might be eligible are urged to contact York County Farm Service Agency located at 120 Pleasant Acres Road, York, PA 17402-8987. Telephone number is (717) 755-2966 extension 2.

N.D. Youth Receives NFU's Seymour Scholarship

AURORA, Colo. — The National Farmers Union Foundation recently announced that Patsy Murphy of Bowman, N.D., is the 2003 recipient of the Hubert K. Seymour Scholarship. The $2,000 scholarship, given annually since 1995, honors Hubert K. Seymour, a Farmers Union leader and rural activist from Illinois.

"Mr. Seymour's children established the scholarship as a living memorial to their father to help deserving young people finance their college education," said Leesa Witt, NFU director of education. "The scholarship serves as a tribute to his commitment to education and his dedication to Farmers Union."

Patsy is the daughter of Jim and Peggy Murphy and a recent graduate of Bowman High School, where she maintained a 3.99 grade point average. She has been a leader and an active participant in cross-country, speech, track, band, chorus, science Olympiad, student council, and the National Honor Society. In addition, she is involved with the "Big Buddy/Little Buddy Program Where Character Counts" in her community.

Murphy will attend the University of North Dakota in Grand Forks in the fall where she plans to study biology and pre-med. She said she intends to become a doctor and would like to eventually have a medical practice in rural America.

New FFA President Steps Into FFA's 'Legacy'

this young man, it does not take long to see how much FFA means to him and his commitment to do his best this year as state president.

However, as a freshman in high school, Eric would have never believed that someday he would have the FFA's top position. He admits he did not know much about the organization until a few weeks into his first agriculture class.

"I walked into my ag classroom my freshman year not really knowing why I signed up for agriculture," said Rubenstein, "But I wanted to take an animal science class. I heard that I had to take this one agriculture class before I could take any other ag classes. When I walked in, I never really even heard of the FFA."

Eric became interested in joining FFA after his agriculture teacher explained what the FFA was and what it could do for students. He thought it would be fun and take advantage of the chapter field trips. After joining, it did not take long before his passion and drive for FFA evolved to become more than just enjoying field trips. Eric states that his first National Convention was a life-changing experience.

"After that first year at National Convention, it really showed me what the FFA could give to you and the different opportunities you could gain from the FFA," noted Eric. Since his first National Convention, Eric has risen to the top in many different areas of competition, including a third place finish at the 2002 National Convention in zoology competition.

Inspiration to run for a state officer position came to Eric after meeting with state officers during their chapter visits to Danville FFA and after another chapter member was selected as a state officer two years ago. Through those experiences, the inspiration for a state office became a goal.

"(I thought that) it would be really neat to travel all across the state and meet different people and influence their lives, the same why that they would influence mine," Eric said.

His selection as the president of this year's state officer team came as surprise at the state activities days at Penn State University in June. As Eric noted his reaction was "extremely shocked, surprised, and amazed."

Although Eric and his fellow state officer team members are new to their offices, they are off and running with a very busy schedule that will keep them on the road for most of July, with visits to the Pennsylvania Governors School for Agriculture, agriculture education meetings, chapter visits, and a trip to Washington, D.C. At each event, the Pennsylvania FFA state officer team will attend, they will continue to promote their theme of "Step Into A Legacy" for FFA across Pennsylvania.

This year's theme, according to Eric, was selected by the state officers in recognition of the state association's 75th anniversary.

"As a state officer team, we are very privileged and honored to serve the state as the 75th team. We want to get more people to step into the (FFA's) legacy," said Eric, expressing that FFA members inheriting this legacy will lead to the building of a stronger organization in Pennsylvania.

Eric will be joined by a talented team of officers in the upcoming year, including State Vice President Amber Frank of Cedar Crest FFA Chapter, Lebanon, Lebanon County; Eastern Region Vice President Brian Oberholtzer, Grassland FFA Chapter, East Earl, Lancaster County; North Central Region Vice President Melissa Sankey, Clearfield FFA, Clearfield, Clearfield County; Amy Kaucher, Cumberland Valley FFA, Mechanicsburg, Cumberland County; Western Region Vice President Becky Hughes, United FFA, New Florence, Westmoreland County; State Secretary Heather Sisto, Bermudian FFA, York Springs, Adams County; State Reporter Bernadette Nace, Big Spring FFA, Carlisle, Cumberland County; State Treasurer Eric Chamberlin, Brockway FFA, Brockway, Jefferson County; State Sentinel Laura Grove, Shippensburg FFA, Shippensburg, Franklin County; and State Chaplin Jason Klouser, Tri-Valley FFA, Hegins, Schuylkill County.

Eric shares his favorite quote by Eleanor Roosevelt as his advice to all FFA members this year:

" 'You gain strength, courage, and confidence from every experience in which you can truly stop and look fear in the face. You can say to yourself I have lived through this. I can take the next thing that comes along. You must do the thing you think you can not do'," said Eric. "With the FFA, if you don't strive to achieve different goals and take your strength, your courage, or your confidence that you gain from different experiences, you are not going to achieve the goals you might have set for yourself."

Lancaster County Weekly Cattle

Report Supplied By USDA
Friday, July 11, 2003

	CATTLE	CALVES
THIS WEEK	2425	2071
LAST WEEK	1688	1853
LAST YEAR	2643	2138

Compared to last week's closing prices, slaughter steers sold mostly steady. Supplies increase substantially this week with the July 4th holiday being out of the way. In addition, majority of the producers finished up in the hay fields last week before the weekend rains. However, buyers were a little hesitant to move livestock early in the week due to the extreme temperatures and humidity. But by week?s end market activity was active especially from the kosher slaughters as they were trying to fill next week slaughter schedules. Additionally, they had plenty to choose from late in the week as quality improved as they continued to trade above the 80.00 mark. Nationally, western direct feedyard?s continued to move the bulk of their live steers at 75.00, with dresses sales at 119.00-120.00, which is steady to weak. The August contracts move up around 71.00, but still trading at a discount to the cash trade. The boxed beef trade was slightly higher for the week, with the Choice and Select spread still around 7.00 as heavy Choice carcasses were at 130.53 on Thursday, with the heavy Select at 123.86. Local Holstein prices were 2.00 to 3.00 higher this week, with some high quality steers trade as high as 75.50. Slaughter heifers sold at mostly steady prices on limited numbers. Slaughter cows finished the week at steady to mostly 2.00 lower after trading as much as 6.00 lower early in the week on some lower quality cows, with excess fill. Slaughter bulls traded steady to firm, with some very high dressing Charolias bulls trading at 67.50-70.75, with a few up to 73.00 early in the week. The reported supply this week in Lancaster County included 885 head of slaughter steers, 157 head of slaughter heifers, 1074 head of slaughter cows, 148 head of slaughter bulls, and 161 head of feeder cattle.

Calf Summary: Compared to last week?s closing prices, slaughter calves sold steady for the week. Holstein bull calves suitable for special-fed veal barns sold steady to 28.00 higher for the week. The greatest price increase was noticed in the Graded Number Two Bull calves in part due to the addition of the Graded Number Three Bull?s to the sifting process. This greatly improved the quality and uniformity of the sorts. After first implemented in Vintage on Tuesday, Number Two Bull calves sold nearly 40.00-60.00 higher, between 137.00- 170.00. Northeast special fed veal mostly 235.00-265.00, few small sales at higher levels on very good demand and very light offerings. The PA Department of Agriculture graded 1344 head of heifers and bulls at the two graded sales in Lancaster County this week, compared to 1190 last week.

Agronomy-Industry Field Day Debuts

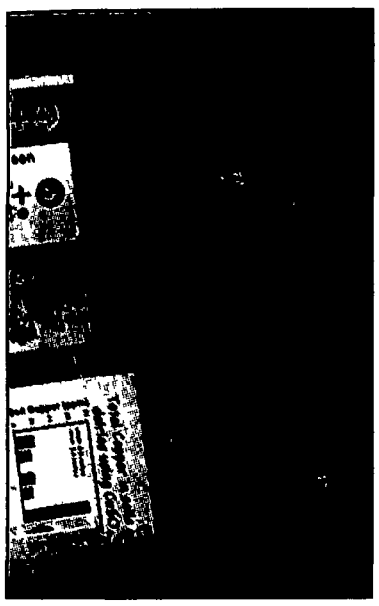
ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

LANDISVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — Beware of spent hoof bath material and "black corn."

That was the take-home message for those who use copper sulfate hoof baths and then spread the spent material along with slurry on fields.

"At what levels would (copper levels) be toxic?" noted Richard C. Stehouwer, associate professor of environmental soil science and extension specialist, Department of Crop and Soil Sciences at Penn State. It varies from soil to soil and crop to crop. "There are no definitive answers."

Copper is toxic to harmful bacteria and is used in the hoof baths to control heel warts in cattle.



Richard C. Stehouwer, soil scientist and extension specialist, speaks about the concerns over spent hoof bath copper buildup.

But not only can the copper prove toxic to some crops in high enough doses, but can be detrimental to livestock as well.

"Black corn" refers to the silage corn that receives a dose of the slurry. Penn State saw in at least one example a concern that has them examining the issue.

More than 200 farmers, agencies, and agri-industry people were part of the first Penn State-sponsored Agronomy-Industry Field Day at the Penn State Southeast Research and Extension Center Wednesday in Landisville. The field day replaces the old "weed day" for seed sales representative traditionally at the site.

Penn State is looking toward showing ways in which growing crops correctly in the right type of system impacts animal growth and overall health.

In soil matter, copper adheres to soil organic matter and clays. The material can prove toxic to some crops, especially in high enough doses. More likely, cattle fed from crops with high doses could also be subject to toxicity.

Three farms using hoof bath waste mixed in with manure near State College were examined. The manure was spread on fields. Soil tests were conducted. Two of the field soil tests revealed no elevated soil copper levels. But one farm clearly had about two to three times as much total copper as needed, noted Stehouwer.

But upon sampling the corn plants, the crop "looked beautiful," he said.

When the researchers looked at black corn, Stehouwer noted that clean corn registered about 5 parts per million (ppm) of copper. Black corn soared to 102 ppm. Washed corn, noted Stehouwer, registered a drop to 30 ppm.

Black corn really has the potential for increasing copper in livestock ration, Stehouwer noted.

The solution to copper management: test the soil and make sure to take plant tissue samples. The copper is absorbed into the animal's liver and could create toxicity problems.

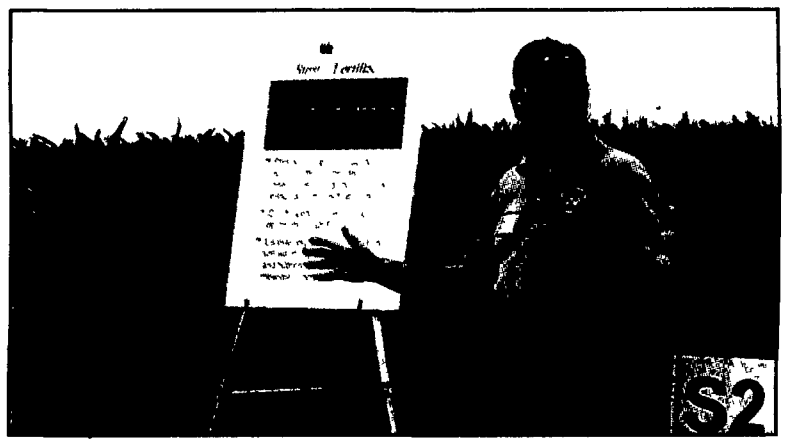
Some people believe zinc baths would be an alternative, but it's just another metal that can prove toxic at high enough concentrations, noted Stehouwer.

Also at the field day, Doug Beegle, professor of agronomy and extension soil fertility specialist, Department of Crop and Soil Sciences, noted that starter fertilizers can produce improved growth response. Comparing 10-30-10 and ammonium sulfate starters provided no yield difference, however.

But on high phosphorus testing soils, out of five times, using ammonium sulfate starter provided a 21 percent increase in total yield. "Will the response pay for the other four times there is no response?" noted Beegle. However you look at it, there is, Beegle said, "little correlation between early growth response and yield response."

Penn State still strongly recommends starter fertilizer on low-testing soils.

A crowd listens attentively during fair weather to Doug Beegle talk about starter fertilizer benefits during the first Agronomy-Industry Field Day near Landisville.



Doug Beegle, soil fertility specialist, examines the benefits of starter fertilizer. Note how tall the corn is during a relatively good growing season.

Other speakers included Sjoerd W. Duiker, assistant professor of soil management and extension specialist, Department of Crop and Soil Sciences, who noted that only 8 percent of the planted acres in Lancaster County are in no-till. There were demonstrations of zone and strip tillage at the field day.

Dave Johnson, manager of the research station, takes over for John Yocum, who retired this year after 41 years of service to Penn State.

Johnson noted Yocum "worked here for 41 years. I'm 41 years old. I have a lot to learn, John. I have big shoes to fill."

Johnson noted that while Yocum was an expert on tobacco, "I know next to nothing on tobacco," Johnson said to those who attended.

Other aspects of the tour, including the latest research information on forage and grain crop production from the field day, is scheduled in Lancaster Farming special sections, including the September issue of Foraging Around and the October issue of Corn Talk.

Research labs around the world report growing evidence that blueberries are powerful little disease fighters.

USDA researches have found that blueberries rank at the top in antioxidant activity when compared to 40 other fresh fruits and vegetables. Antioxidants help neutralize harmful free radicals that can lead to cancer and other age-related diseases.

Scientists discovered that feeding blueberries to laboratory rats slowed age-related loss in mental capacity and memory, a finding that has important implications for humans.

Blueberries are also believed to help reduce built up of so-called bad cholesterol. Blueberries also promote urinary tract health and reduce the risk of infection. Studies show that eating blueberries may improve eyesight and even promote positive physiological and cosmetic benefits. For more information on these interesting studies, check out the Website www.ushbc.org/health.htm.

Blueberries are most nutritious eaten fresh, but also can be incorporated into scrumptious desserts such as this one from one of our readers.

WARM, FRESH BLUEBERRY PUDDING

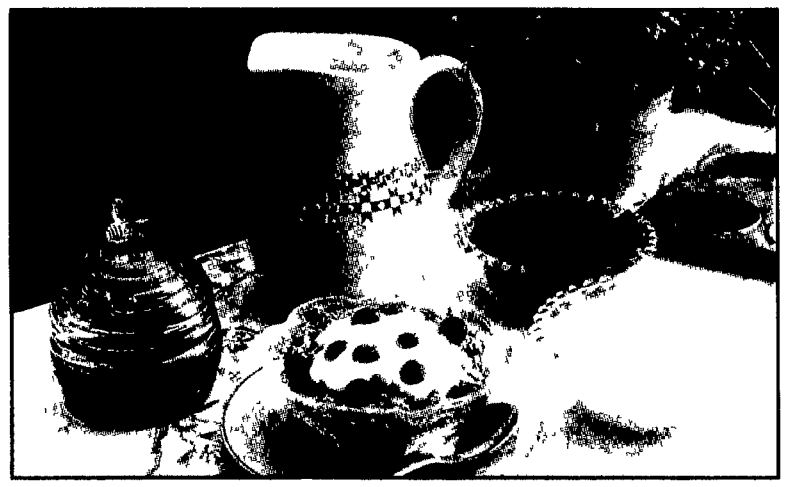
2 tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca
⅓ cup granulated sugar
⅓ cup firmly packed brown sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
¾ cup water
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 tablespoon butter
2 cups fresh blueberries
1½ cups sifted cake flour
2 teaspoons double-acting baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons butter
¾ cup granulated sugar
¾ cup milk
½ teaspoon vanilla

Combine tapioca, ⅓ cup granulated sugar, brown sugar, ¼ teaspoon salt, and water in saucepan. Cook and stir over medium heat until mixture comes to a boil. Add lemon juice, 1 tablespoon butter and blueberries. Let stand 15 minutes.

Meanwhile, combine sifted flour, baking powder, and ½ teaspoon salt; sift together. Cream 3 tablespoons butter, add ¾ cup granulated sugar gradually; cream together well.

Add flour mixture alternately with milk in small amounts, beat well. Add vanilla.

Stir blueberry mixture and pour into a greased 1½-quart casserole or 8x8x2-inch pan. Spoon batter over blueberry mixture. Bake in 375 degree oven for one hour. Serve hot with cream. Serves 8-10.



Eaten raw or incorporated into baked or cooked dishes, blueberries provide taste appeal and amazing nutritional benefits.

On Being a Farm Wife

(and other hazards)

Joyce Bupp

Gentle and dark are the summer nights.

Well, sort of.

Most summer nights are gentle, except for times like these July heat blasts, when the daytime temperatures snuggle up near 100 and the nights cool to slightly below 80. Sticky, sultry, or muggy is much more appropriate; maybe just plain down miserable. Nights when sleeping out on the porch seems like a good alternative to the overheated upper levels of an old brick farmhouse. Until mosquitos join the slumber party.

The dog's choice, snoozing on the basement's cool concrete floor, almost sounds more appealing. And, minus the mosquitos.

Nor are summer nights too gentle when blustery thunderstorms, spawned by those conditions, rip across the countryside. But they often do bring needed moisture and at least temporary relief from heat extremes, as Mother Nature rebels against her midsummer mugginess.

Still, both the sticky, sultry nights and moisture-laden thunderstorms boost growth on field crops like corn, soybeans, and hay. Their heat will also help hurry-up the tomatoes we're anxious for and keep that grass that we all love to mow fresh and green.

How dark the nights get, though, depends on one's vantage point. Real darkness is what's outside the windows of the mountain hunting cabin at night, with trees are so tall and thick that even the moon is hard to spot. Darkness is what stretches beyond the house during one of those super-foggy nights in late fall.

Nights are never very dark in our immediate surroundings. Unless the power goes off.

For safety and security reasons, vast numbers of us have dotted our properties with the glow of night lights. These shining white beacons illuminate large patches of dark, pushing back the mysterious blackness and providing daylight-like visibility within their reach.

Bright, white lights not only lighten the dark summer nights, they also allow us to not only hear the screechings and squallings of the tomcats squabbling over territory, but also to see them chasing one another outside the dairy barn. The nightlight at the dairy barn shines the way for an after-dark trip to the milkhouse, so 4 a.m. breakfast is not milk-less cereal. It reassures us that the banging outside the boxstalls is merely from a cow that slipped her neckchain and not one of those wandering black bears that have recently been roaming our area.

July always provides very special summer lights to dot the darkness.

"A lightning bug!" the grandkids shouted one evening recently, as heating-up nights brought the first fireflies out to blink in search of companionship. "Grandma, let's catch it!"

"Poor bug is probably terrified," chuckled our daughter, as three gleeful sets of hands and feet chased across the grass through deepening dusk to snag the elusive flashing insect. Apparently sensing the imminent threat from too much affection, the firefly promptly switched direction and was last seen crawling beneath a strawberry plant.

Clouds of the phosphorescent beetles hatch out with the onset of hot summer nights. They wink and blink, signalling their presence and eager participation in this annual insect proliferation marathon. Thousands of them, hovering over the corn rows as dusk slides to night, create a pulsing, sparkling effect that is almost magical.

Pity the kids that never spend a gentle summer night chasing lightning bugs. Even two-year-old Sarah, still not convinced that earthworms are not life-threatening monsters, overcomes her insectophobia long enough to chase "flashlight bugs." Firefly chases offer clean wholesome exercise (those bugs are speedy in search of mates), teaching opportunities (lots of beginner science discussions) and help sharpen observation skills (where will that bug flash next?).

Lightning bugs, like gentle summer nights, are a fleeting, short-lived commodity. And, after our interminably bitter winter, fireflies flitting over the fields are a welcome change from snowflakes.

How blessed we are to be able to enjoy both in their seasons.

Look For The Energy Star

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — If you look for the Energy Star when you shop for appliances and equipment for your farm and home, advises an energy expert in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences, you can reduce your energy expenses.

Energy Star is a federal government program designed to help people and businesses protect the environment by increasing energy efficiency. According to Dennis Buffington, professor of agricultural and biological engineering, products that earn the Energy Star label must meet strict criteria — including using less energy than standard products — without sacrificing features, style or comfort.

"While it is true that many Energy Star products cost more initially than the standard items, the value of the energy saved over the life of the product exceed the extra initial cost of the Energy Star product," says Buffington.

"Realistically, homeowners and businesses can increase energy efficiency enough to reduce their energy expenditures by 20 to 30 percent," Buffington said.

- Energy Star refrigerators must be at least 10 percent more efficient than the minimum federal efficiency standard for refrigerators.
- Energy Star televisions must consume no more than 3 watts of electricity when turned off, compared to a standard television that consumes nearly 6 watts on average when off.
- Energy Star furnaces must have an efficiency of at least 90 percent, whereas the minimum federal efficiency standard for furnaces is 75 percent.
- Energy Star light bulbs must use no more than one-third the amount of electricity used by a standard incandescent bulb and also must meet criteria for useful life and reliability.

Eat From The Rainbow

Would you like to:

- Lose or maintain your weight?
- Avoid a stroke?
- Keep your blood pressure in check?
- Keep your vision as you age?
- Bolster your immune system?
- Lower your risk for heart disease and cancer? Then eat your fruits and veggies!

Fruits and veggies are low in fat and calories but high in antioxidants and fiber. Fruits and veggies are great for your heart because they have little saturated fat and no cholesterol (since they come from a plant). They can even help you lose weight, which can help lower your blood pressure and your risk for diabetes and heart disease.

Fruits and veggies can also help to prevent cancer. A high fiber diet promotes "rapid transit" of foods through your system so that the carcinogens don't have time to linger.

Think of fiber as the body's broom. Did you know that 35 percent of all cancer deaths may be related to what we eat?

Why not turn around the typical American high fat, low-fiber diet by getting the recommended 5-9 servings of fruits and veggies a day! How much is a serving of fruits and vegetables?

- ½ cup of fruit or cooked vegetable
- ¼ cup of fruit or vegetable juice
- 1 cup leafy vegetable such as salad greens
- ¼ cup dried fruit

What's in fruits and vegetables?

Vitamins and Minerals such as

- Vitamins C and E to help fight heart disease and cancer
- Folate to prevent neural tube birth defects and protect against heart disease
- Beta-Carotene/Vitamin A for good eyes helps avoid macular degeneration
- Calcium and magnesium for strong bones to help prevent osteoporosis
- Iron to prevent anemia
- Potassium to regulate blood pressure
- Fiber to prevent constipation, keep blood sugar levels steady, lower cholesterol, and help prevent colon cancer
- Phytochemicals or "plant chemicals" that help keep both the plants and our bodies healthy. They can help prevent heart disease and cancer in our body. Examples are allium compounds in garlic and onions and sulphur compounds in cruciferous vegetables like cabbage and broccoli. Lycopenes in tomatoes help fight prostate and lung cancer.

Variety and color are key!

No food is perfect, so eat a variety of fruits and veggies! The darker, the deeper the color the better! Thus dark-fleshed acorn squash is better than light-fleshed zucchini. Dark green leafy lettuce is better than head lettuce which is mostly water.

Eat from the rainbow! Go for:

- Dark green Broccoli, Brussels sprouts, spinach, romaine lettuce, are rich in folate that helps reduce heart disease, birth defects, macular degeneration and possibly even Alzheimer's Disease.
- Orange: Apricots, cantaloupe, carrots, pumpkin, sweet potatoes, oranges, winter squash. Their vitamin C and beta-carotene can help stop the spread of cancer cells.
- Red: Peppers/grapes/grapefruit, water melon, tomatoes and strawberries, are loaded with antioxidants to help fight cancer. Cranberries promote urinary health.
- Blue/Purple: Blueberries, blackberries, plums, grapes are rich in antioxidants that may help fight gastrointestinal cancers.

Easy Ways to Get 5 or More A Day!

- Use frozen vegetables steam, microwave, or saut with a little garlic and olive oil
- Buy pre-washed/peeled baby carrots. These make great snacks that kids love!
- Put left over vegetables in soups and omelets.
- Munch on raw veggies while you fix dinner
- Fold grated carrots into muffins, breads, meat loaf and meat balls to makes them moist!
- Put berries on cereal, pancakes and yogurt
- Snack on dried and fresh fruits
- Drink 100% fruit and vegetable juices
- Make a refreshing smoothie in a blender.

Here's one to cool you off on a hot summer day. Simply blend in a blender one half of a ripe banana, peeled, frozen, and sliced, along with 1 cup cold orange juice, and one half cup frozen sliced strawberries. The banana provides potassium and makes the smoothie thick while the orange juice and strawberries provide lots of vitamin C. If there's any smoothie left, turn it into a popsicle by freezing it in a mold.

Remember, when it comes to meals and snacks, think "Color."

Susquehanna Dairy Princess Spotlights Rogers' Family Farm

SPRINGVILLE (Susquehanna Co.) — Shana Mack, Susquehanna County Dairy Princess, randomly picks a dairy farm to spotlight each month. This month she picked J.A. Rogers and Sons Farm, owned and operated by Jim and Rosemary Rogers Sr. and their sons Danny Rogers and Jim and Tina Rogers.

The farm is located in Springville Township and consists of 118 acres owned and 100 acres rented.

The five-generation farm originally was purchased in 1933 by Rogers' grandfather.

Rogers, his sons, and grandchildren do all the milking, feeding and barn chores on the 144-head herd housed in two tiestall barns. The Rogers harvest 150 acres of hay, but do not plant corn. The herd consists of Holsteins and Brown Swiss. The herd does not go out on pasture, but kept inside day and night.

The Rogers have received DHIA and Chesapeake Bay Awards along with the Dairy of Distinction Award. This farm is unique because it's really two farms in one. Jim Sr. and Jim Jr. each have their own milking herd. They have two pipelines and two bulk tanks that enable them to keep the milk separate while sharing all other farm expenses. Their recent herd average was 23,506 pounds of milk.

For those nice warm days, here is a refreshing drink you might like to try.

Strawberry Cow

½ cup slices fresh strawberries
1 pint strawberry ice cream, softened
1½ cups chilled cream soda
Whipped cream
Fresh whole strawberries

Mash strawberries. Stir together half of the ice cream and ⅓ of the cream soda. Divide among three tall glasses. Place one scoop of ice cream in each glass. Pour enough soda to cover ice cream and strawberry mixture. Garnish each with whipped cream and a fresh whole strawberry.

Well Preserved

The Well Preserved news column is prepared by Lancaster County Cooperative Extension. It includes food preservation information and questions.

The Spoilers

Microorganisms and enzymes are the principle causes of spoilage in home food preservation. Because molds, yeasts, and bacteria are found everywhere in the air and soil, on people and animals, and on many surfaces, proper food preservation methods must be used to prevent them from causing food spoilage.

The effects of these microorganisms can range from soft, slimy textures and unpleasant odors to food poisoning that can be deadly.

Molds can be recognized by their fuzzy masses that can be nearly any color. Molds need air and moisture to grow. They thrive in the acid conditions provided by food. Molds can easily be destroyed by the high temperatures used in processing. Some molds produce invisible mycotoxins, which are harmful to eat. This is why it is important to process all canned foods including pickles, jams, and jellies.

Yeast masses in or on food appear as slime, scum, or murkiness. Yeasts may cause foods to ferment and can be recognized by gas bubbles, froth, or foam. These are easily destroyed at temperatures between 140F and 180F.

Some bacteria can be beneficial as in making sauerkraut. Others can be extremely dangerous as in botulism poisoning. Each type of bacteria differs as to the temperature and environment in which it thrives. Some need oxygen to grow while others thrive in the lack of oxygen in a sealed jar. Most bacteria grow on low acid foods including vegetables and meats. While most bacteria are destroyed by heat, others form spores that can only be killed by temperatures higher than the boiling point of water. It is because of the Clostridium botulinum bacteria that low-acid vegetables and meats must be processed in a pressure canner where the temperature can reach at least 240F.

Bacteria can multiply rapidly with millions growing on a gram of food in just a few hours. At this concentration they can spoil food or cause a food-borne illness. Freezing food slows the growth of most bacteria. Care must be taken to prevent the growth of bacteria in food before it is frozen and after it is thawed.

Enzymes are naturally occurring substances in foods that promote the normal ripening process. If they continue to work after the fruit or vegetable reaches its ideal maturity, they will cause undesirable changes in color, texture, flavor, and nutrition. Flavor changes are sometimes described as hay-like, bitter, oxidized, or old. Enzymes can be inactivated by heating foods to 170F to 190F.

Processing foods when canning or blanching vegetables for freezing stops enzyme reactions. Adding ascorbic or citric acid to fruits for freezing slows enzymatic action.

The following methods will prevent microorganisms and enzymes from causing spoilage. Use top-quality produce that is free of disease and mold. Can foods immediately after harvest. Wash produce thoroughly. Discard over-ripe produce. Use proper canning methods and equipment. Always pressure can low acid vegetables and meats. Acidfy tomatoes with lemon juice or citric acid. Sterilize jars that will be processed for less than 10 minutes. Use clean equipment and work surfaces. Follow a USDA tested recipe and process the food for the specified time. Adjust canning times and pressure for higher altitudes. Never taste a food you suspect of being spoiled. If in doubt, throw it out.

If you have food preservation questions, a home economist is available to answer questions on Wednesdays 10:00 a.m.1:00 p.m., call (717) 394-6851 or write Penn State Cooperative Extension, Lancaster County, 1383 Arcadia Rd., Rm.1, Lancaster, PA, 17601.

Safe Play Areas On Farms

MARSHFIELD, Wis. — Children are curious and perceive the farm as a giant playground. But children are not always able to recognize hazards.

If off-farm childcare is not an option, then it is important to have the safest place possible for children to play.

A new booklet from the National Children's Center for Rural and Agricultural Health and Safety (NCCRAHS) provides the first comprehensive guidelines for designing and building a safe play area on a farm. NCCRAHS is a core unit of the National Farm Medicine Center, Marshfield Clinic and strives to enhance the health and safety of all children exposed to hazards associated with agricultural work and rural environments.

"Creating Safe Play Areas on Farms" is a 32-page illustrated document intended for safety professionals; rural and farm community leaders; and farm owners. Its focus is on children ages 2-10 who live on or visit farms and other agricultural settings.

Each year an estimated 33,000 children are seriously injured on U.S. farms. More than half the injuries are incurred by children not participating in farm work.

With effective adult supervision, safe play activities allow children to experience physical, emotional, social, and intellectual development.

The booklet defines a safe play area as a carefully planned, designated location with limited exposure to hazards such as traffic, agricultural production, and environmental concerns.

"Creating Safe Play Areas on Farms" is a unique resource that blends playground safety, farm safety, child development, environmental health, and adult supervision. Experts in these areas served as primary and secondary reviewers of content. Additional feedback was gathered at farm parent focus groups held in New York, Iowa, and Wisconsin.

Since the booklet's release, feedback from safety professionals and the farm community has been positive.

"Creating Safe Play Areas on Farms" is available for downloading in .pdf format at http://research.marshfieldclinic.org/children/. For information or to order free paper copies, contact the National Children's Center, (888) 924-7233.

Svonavec Farm Is Site For Cancer Fundraiser

SANDRA LEPLEY
Somerset Co. Correspondent

NEWCENTERVILLE (Somerset Co.) — Ten years ago, a farm girl from Somerset County fought a courageous battle with cancer and lost. She died without realizing the difference she would make in other people's lives someday.

Karen Marteeny, Somerset, was only 23 years old when she died from complications of a bone marrow transplant on April 28, 1993, at Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore, Md.

She fought bravely. After she was diagnosed with cancer as a young college student, she and her family added several thousands of names of people who were tested for the National Bone Marrow Registry. During the transplant procedure, the community read newspaper articles regularly to see how she was doing.

Her parents, Bill and Connie Marteeny, retired from farming a few years afterwards. Connie continues to work as a registered nurse at the local state hospital, which was in the past few years converted to a prison.

"We have never forgotten about her," said Connie, who has an older son named Mark and two grandchildren. "She is in our thoughts constantly. That's why we need to find a cure for cancer and help those suffering with cancer. We want to be able to educate others about early prevention."

The Marteenys became actively involved with fund raising for the American Cancer Society shortly after Karen died. Every year, their Awesome Angels team for Relay-For-Life, a Cancer Society event held in communities throughout the nation, has been a top fund-raising group.

This year, the Awesome Angels outdid themselves. They staged a farmland fantasy show with a Renaissance flair and raised more than $16,000 in two evenings.

The Medieval Mayhem kingdom of Lamb-alot came into being primarily through the imagination of Betty Lou Svonavec, a local playwright from New Centerville.

"I was apprehensive when I was first approached," said Svonavec, "but then I saw how everyone helped out and believed in this cause. The teamwork was unbelievable."

The idea of the dinner theater fund-raiser was actually the brainchild of Sue Darr of Somerset, a close friend of the Marteenys and a member of the Awesome Angels team.

Darr asked Svonavec to become involved because she knew that Svonavec wrote plays for high schools.

"This has come a long way. I didn't expect this to be so big but once everyone heard about it, it sold out. If we can get the teamwork we did this year, it will definitely be something that continues," said Darr.

The players came from all walks of life and from all different age groups, but every participant's life had been touched by cancer in some way.

Jesters and town criers, maids and wenches, Merlin the wizard, a king and queen and princes too made up the entertaining kingdom in Somerset County.

Svonavec estimated that more than 60 people were involved in the play and for each of the two nights, more than 160 people attended, 20 of whom paid $500 each evening for a corporate table.

"I didn't expect to do this in a barn to be truthful," laughed Roni Bhullar of Somerset, who played a prince. "I expected to do this in a high school auditorium but that is one of the best features of this fund-raiser."

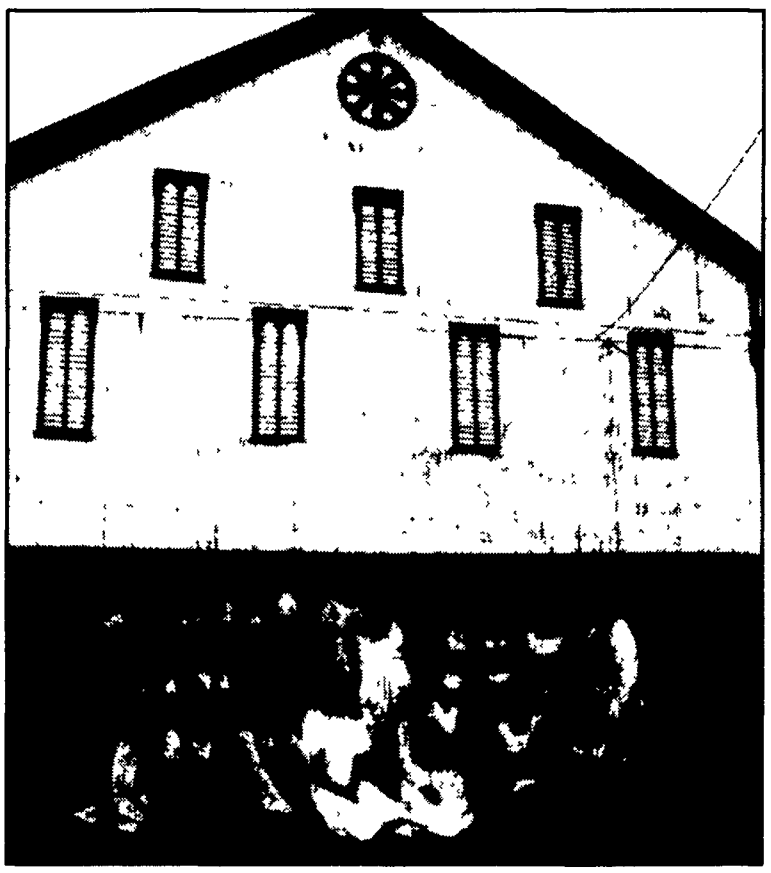
The distant cries of lambs, which were turned outside for the summer, could be heard during the event but most people didn't notice or didn't mind as they enjoyed the social atmosphere in the upstairs of Svonavec's barn, where a stage was erected earlier, and actors emerged from the hayloft.

"This was a great time for a good cause," said Svonavec. "We had so much fun and people were asking if we would do it again soon if there would be enough people interested."

Connie Marteeny believes Karen would have enjoyed the event had she been here and would have appreciated everyone's help.

Shortly before she died, Karen became a home economics teacher at Somerset Area High School, her alma mater. Her parents have established an annual $300 scholarship in her name for home economics students.

"Karen would have liked this event very much. She was a special person. We appreciate all those who were involved," said Connie.



Wenches or servant girls in the Medieval Mayhem play in Somerset County strike a pose outside the Svonavec barn, where the play was held earlier this month as an American Cancer Society fund-raiser.

Betty Lou Svonavec, playwright and farm owner, talks with Merlin the Wizard, played by John Hilligoss, Somerset, who served as the narrator for the Medieval Mayhem play, recently conducted in Svonavec's barn.

Connie Marteeny, left, and Jessica Darr, a friend and neighbor, look over corporate banners for the Medieval Mayhem play. Marteeny sewed the banners, which were hung on poles on the entrance to the farm. Marteeny is instrumental in this fund-raiser and has been involved in the Relay-For-Life event after her daughter Karen died in 1993 from complications from a bone marrow transplant required for cancer treatment.

Dinner theater actress Heidi Svonavec is best known to readers as the former Pennsylvania Lamb and Wool Queen and the recipient of numerous Pennsylvania Farm Show trophies for exhibiting grand champion market lambs.

But this directory has it all, even the Shenandoah Valley Steam and Gas Engine Show July 25-27 in Berryville, Va. and the National Threshers Association, Inc. 59th Annual Reunion at the Fulton County Fairgrounds in Wauseon, Ohio (just passed us on June 26-29).

There's even the 6th Annual Southern Maryland Farm-Life Festival Oct. 11-12 in Charlotte Hall, Md. and the Mason-Dixon Historical Society, Inc. 41st Annual Steam and Gas Roundup at the Carroll County (Maryland) Farm Museum Sept. 5-7.

Included in this comprehensive guide are a show directory for national clubs and publications, show features by manufacturer, a chronological show listing, and an ad index.

Summertime Chores Provide Learning Experiences, Fun

Robert, 13, prepares Fireball, a feisty red Holstein, for upcoming competition.

Kacie, 12, keeps her own garden plot weed-free.

Duane and Marilyn Hershey and their children, Steve, 17; Kelby, 15; Robert, 13; and Kacie, 12, stand in front of the "old barn", left, where 4-H projects are housed with the pregnant cows. Two years ago, the Hersheys expanded their milking herd of 65 cows to about 400 head.

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family
Features Editor

COCHRANVILLE (Chester Co.) — Not too many kids like to awaken at 3 a.m., but 12-year-old Kacie Hershey jumped out of bed at first call on July 2.

Her favorite cow had calved, her dad said. But he didn't tell her the most exciting news until she saw it for herself.

Not one, but two newborn calves lay in the hay. And, both were heifers, which jump started Kacie's growing herd numbers from three to five.

Estatic, Kacie promptly named the twins Marshmallow and Marble, "because they looked like that," Kacie said.

The birth of calves on the Hershey family's Ar-Joy Farm is certainly not an uncommon event. In the past 30 days, 52 calves were born to the milking herd, which numbers about 400 cows.

The difference is that the twin calves are Kacie's own responsibility and will be incorporated into her 4-H projects.

"I won't be able to show them this summer, but I will next year," Kacie said.

The wobbly twins are certain to be pampered and primped along with Kacie's two heifers Tomali and Penny, which will be entered in competition this year.

"I don't enter shows to win — I do it for fun," Kacie said.

Her 13-year-old brother Robert also raises 4-H animals for fun.

Robert has about six black and white Holstein heifers and a Red and White Holstein named Fireball.

Fireball lives up to the vision conjured by her name. Robert has been trying to tame Fireball's wild side so that she will walk calmly around the show ring during upcoming competition at Kimberton Fair and Chester County 4-H Roundup and district shows.

Twin heifers Marshmallow and Marble delighted Kacie with their birth the day this photo was taken. Although the twins are too young to compete this year, they will be honed for shows next year.

Halter leading is part of the training.

"I keep the halter tight so her head stays up and she walks close to me," Robert said. "The more we practice walking with them (show animals), the easier it is, and the tamer they become. The animals often get tamer as they get older."

Robert confided, "I like walking in the shows with the animals, but I don't like the practice."

Another requirement is fitting the animal, which requires cleaning and clipping the animals to groom them for appearance.

"I just learned how to clip the top and blend the hair in with the other hair," Kacie said of fitting her string of animals for showing.

She practices on non-show animals to perfect her clipping skills.

Audiences who watch shows are often unaware that exhibitors need to do much more than lead animals around the show ring.

"We need to know the name of the mother and father of the animals we are showing, the birth date, and other stuff," Kacie said.

Required, but not a favorite activity of Kacie and Robert are updating record books that chart details and expenses on each 4-H project.

Kacie and Robert are the children of Duane and Marilyn Hershey. They also have two older brothers, Steve, 17, and Kelby, 15.

Two years ago, the Hersheys expanded from milking 65 cows to 400.

It's a lot of work milking so many cows on the farm, so the family employs several Mexican workers for the actual milking, which frees Duane to manage the operation. Marilyn oversees the calf operation.

According to Marilyn, 4-H participation has really helped Kacie and Robert take pride in working with the calves, not just their own animals but the whole herd.

Robert bottle-feeds many of the calves. He is vice president of the the South Chester County Dairy Club. Kacie is treasurer.

"Chester County dairy families stick together to keep a dairy community. We don't want to see our numbers dwindle," Marilyn said.

Last year, dairy families resurrected a defunct Junior Holstein Club and saw the 4-H Dairy Bowl team advance to state competition.

Robert and Kacie are active in their church's junior high group. At school, Kacie is treasurer of the Bible Club and plays basketball and soccer. Robert participates in wrestling and track competitions.

Summer enables the Hershey family to have a more leisurely schedules, but when school starts, they will return to the schedule of Robert and Kelby helping in the barn from 6 a.m. to about 6:30 a.m. with calf care.

"If all three work together, it doesn't take so long," Marilyn said. "I stay longer to finish up, and I take care of the evening work when the children have sports activities. I think it is important that they are able to participate in a variety of events."

This summer, Kacie has her own garden in addition to helping in the family plot. Kacie is also in charge of feeding the 5-10 cats they keep on the farm.

Kacie wants to be a photographer when she grows up. Robert wants to try his hand at cartoon animation or woodworking. He'd also like to continue to help on the family farm, but not own it, he said.

"Who knows?" he conceded. "I may change my mind."

In the interim, Kacie and Robert say they enjoy life on the farm.

Amazing Maize Maze Celebrates America's Centennial Of Flight

PARADISE (Lancaster Co.) — First Flight Centennial celebrations are planned across the U.S. The absolute corniest is in Lancaster County at Cherry-Crest Farm, where the Eighth Annual Amazing Maize Maze will salute "100 EARS of Flight." The gigantic recreation of the The Wright Flyer — carved in a 5-acre field of corn — will have 2.5 miles of paths that wind in, through, and around the famous biplane, sun, and clouds. The goal is to find Orville Wright, who is portrayed waving to his brother Wilbur as he takes the air for the very first time.

Open July 5 through Nov. 1, Cherry-Crest Farm offers a full roster of family activities in three venues — the Barnyard, the Courtyard, and the 100 EARS of Flight maze. In the maze there are "easy" and "difficult" options. There's music and a script, scenic bridges, hidden clues and Kernels of Knowledge, and a puzzle map that helps find the quickest way out. There are two flight Controllers to answer questions and keep visitors on track. Diversions along the way include the new Wingwalk, Cargo Chute, Wright Wind Tunnel and Barn Door Shuttle, the Space Misting Station (a fun place to cool off), Inflight Cafe, and lots more.

Other activities include the Courtyard which features the Furry Friends petting farm starring a new Goat Mountain. In addition there is the Hands-On Farm-Ed Center with interactive displays like a milking cow, live baby chicks hatchery, and observation bee hive, an enlarged Kid's Corral for outdoor play, and the Rain Room. A farm tour wagon ride includes guided tours of the 175-acre working cattle and poultry operations.

On the adjoining hillside is the Barnyard with its Hay Jump Tent, Hay Tunnel, Corn Crib, Pumpkin Slinger and Giant Hay Chute Slide, a new Hay Fort, and a scenic farm-view walk that meanders through the Wonders of Flight floral artwork (mural of a single engine plane in flight created out of 17,000 red, white, and blue petunias). In between there are three Logic Mazes (fun for the little ones), Rubber Ducky Water Race, plus food and picnic areas.

Special events are also scheduled, from a Kids Pedal Tractor Pull to Dairy, Corn and Conservation Exhibitions, Saturday Harvest Roundup Festivals, Maze Madness Mania on Labor Day and Columbus Day weekends (includes Saturday moonlight and holiday daytime mazes), plus a "Pick-Your-Own-To-Take-Home" Fall Farmers Market.

Maze summer hours (July 5-Aug. 31) are: Tuesday-Thursday 10 a.m.-5 p.m., Friday-Saturday 10 a.m. until dusk. Fall hours (Sept. 5-Nov. 1, including all holiday Mondays) are: Friday-Saturday 10 a.m. until dusk. Last entrance to the maze is 90 minutes prior to closing. Cherry-Crest Farm is closed Sundays and Mondays.

Admission to the farm which includes the maze, all activities in the barnyard and courtyard, and parking, is $10.75 for adults (age 12 and over), $8.75 for kids age 5 to 11, and $6.75 for kids age 3-4. Children age 2 and under are admitted free of charge. A Railroad/Farm Combo Pass for a ride on the Strasburg Railroad steam train and admission to Cherry-Crest Farm is available on-line and on-site.

Ida's Notebook

by Ida Risser

Summer is the time to start to harvest things from our gardens. There are beans to pick and red beets to pull. The peas lasted into July. When I pick them in the hot sun, I look forward to sitting on the back porch and hulling them. Gradually I'm filling my freezers again as they were quite empty. However, we do have quite a bit of fruit from last year — mostly black raspberries and applesauce.

Our daughter and grandchildren visited us for a few days. They drove from Atlanta in one day. While they were here, we picked sour cherries and canned peaches that they brought from South Carolina. Judy also made peach jam which she gave away. The youngest girl was a tree climber and picked cherries that the others could not reach.

We also found time to visit some relatives. One lives in a retirement community and has a garden too. He told us that a groundhog ate their heads of cabbage. My cabbage does not even have heads although we've been eating broccoli.

As one of our cars has a split front seat, our daughters managed to get Allen into the car so that he need not lay in the back seat. One son thought he was funny when he told me that I should take out the windshield, and then he could put his leg straight through it. If you cannot laugh about a situation, you might cry about it.

Author Touts Traditional Diets From Grassfed Livestock

KATRINA OBERHOLTZER
Special Correspondent

BIRD-IN-HAND (Lancaster Co.) — With 150 people registered and many more latecomers, the meeting house at Amish-owned Miller's Natural Foods store was filled with people interested in information and opinions on why grass-fed meats and milk may be healthier for both our bodies and our farms.

Sally Fallon, president of Weston A. Price Foundation and author of "Nourishing Traditions," spoke on what she sees as a possible viable niche for the small family-owned farm.

While making clear she had no experience as a farmer, she outlined the advantages of grass-fed animal products and how these products could vitalize the small farm.

Fallon uses the work of Dr. Weston A. Price, a dentist who in the 1950s began a 10-year study on the diets of tribes and villages isolated from Western processed foods and having superior health and teeth.

After identifying various primative people groups with "perfect" teeth, Price made the observation that most of these peoples had wide facial bones, well-formed teeth and few cavities despite the lack of daily brushing.

After identifying various primative people groups world-wide with exemplary health, Price then compared the traditional diets in order to find commonalities.

He made note that these primative diets contained four times the calcium and other minerals and 10 times the fat-soluble vitamins compared to the typical American diet of his day.

Sally Fallon

On later trips, Price also noted that once these same groups were introduced to processed foods, the first generation offspring had more narrow faces, crowded teeth, and the tendancy for cavities.

At a time when dentists were not available, these dental problems caused great suffering in communities.

Fallon calls these processed foods "the displacing foods of modern commerce," and believes Americans are experiencing similar health problems as those identified by Price.

She emphasized that the "trend toward degenerative bone structure is reversible."

Traditionally, these primitive groups had "sacred foods" that were valued in the community for their life-giving force.

These included liver, eggs, organ meat, and fish eggs. Fallon gives the example of nursing mothers in China eating up to 10 eggs per day, Alaskans eating bear fat for fertility, and African athletes drinking pure cream.

Fallon believes that our own sacred food should be butter, cream, and cheese made from cows on early spring grass.

Since most American children cannot be persuaded to eat the organ meat and other delicacies many of these primitive cultures added to their diets, Fallon believes grassfed milk products are the perfect source for these health-promoting nutrients.

Fallon also believes that "most (American) people today are not satisfied by what they eat."

According to Fallon, grass-fed products, and especially raw milk, contain nutrients missing in products from confinement livestock operations but essential for our health.

These nutrients include congulated linoleic acid (CLA), Activator X, and increased vitamins A and D.

Conjugated Linoleic Acid (CLA), known as a cancer protectant, promotes lean bodies, increases breast milk, and has many other benefits. According to Fallon, CLA requires grass for production, and is not found in grainfed meats and milks.

Activator X is a lesser-known substance said to protect against heart disease. It is a catalyst which, like vitamins A and D, helps the body absorb and utilize minerals. It is found in the organ meats of grazing animals and some seafood.

According to Fallon, deep yellow butter from cows eating actively growing grass in the spring and fall seasons can be an especially rich source of Activator X.

Increased vitamins A and D. Fallon points out that milk from cows not on pasture contains much less vitamin A and D than that from cows on freshly growing grass.

According to Fallon, what is often labeled vitamin A in plant products is actually betacarotine, a substance that needs to be converted into useable vitamin A by our bodies.

While healthy adult bodies can convert betacarotine, Fallon warns that babies, children, diabetics, and older persons may have difficulty. She emphasizes that cows complete the process for us.

Fallon also warns that pesticides interfere with vitamin A and those exposed to pesticides need extra vitamin A.

Fallon does not avocate the lowfat diets of most programs.

'To get the benefits of grassfed (products), you have to eat the fat," Fallon said. She suggested the website http://wwwrealmilk.com for more info comparing types of milks.

Fallon believes that the ideal small farm would be a pasture-based program capitalizing on the heath-giving benefits of pastured products. She believes cream and products made from cream would make the cow the primary cash animal of the farm.

From this she recommends making butter and cheese. The farmers could make use of the byproduct, whey, as the ideal food for growing hogs and poultry.

She visualizes farmers producing as many valued-added products as possible, mentioning farms that were now selling chicken broth at $16 per quart. While she admits value-added products might be labor intensive for one family, she suggests farms might have several families working together.

Fallon added that pasture-based operations eliminate some of the extra expenses of conventional farming. She also compared the lifespan of dairy cows on the two programs noting that pastured cows tend to have longer productive lives.

According to Fallon, some states are now getting $50 per hundredweight for pastured milk. She advocated selling directly to the public whenever possible. States do have different regulations on selling raw milk, but at this time there are no regulations on private sales of raw milk in Pennsylvania.

Although Fallon promotes animal-based diets, she jokingly told the audience that vegetarians can find good health from their diets "if they drink good quality milk and eat insects."

She added that pastured eggs will provide the same nutrition insects provided to those primitive vegetable-based diets.

Following Fallon's presentation a panel of local farmers using a pasture-based approach answered questions from the audience. Roman Stoltzfoos and Amish farmers John Esh, Leroy Miller, and Jake Zook fielded questions directly related to farming .

Sally Fallon was available to answer questions related to the nutrition of grassfed products. Geoffrey Morell, a former New Zealand farmer using a pasture-based approach, added an international perspective. Morell is the secretary of the Weston A Price Foundation.

After a long day of interviews, speech presentations, skits, and impromptu questions, Regina Steppe was crowned 2003-2004 Lycoming County Dairy Princess.

Vanessa Greider and Brittany Swisher were crowned 2003-2004 Lycoming County Alternate Dairy Princesses.

Cecil County Farm Museum Hosts Old-Time Farm Days

FAIR HILL, Md. — The Cecil County Fair and the Cecil County Farm Museum will host the seventh annual Old Time Farm Days at the fairground on Saturday and Sunday July 19-20. The fairground is located in northern Cecil County just east of the Fair Hill intersection of Maryland Routes 273 and 213.

The festivities begin Friday evening July 18 at 7:30 p.m. with the Classic Tractor Pull (for tractors built between 1960 and 1972). An added feature this year, will be a Garden Tractor Pull. It, too, will begin at 7:30 on Friday evening.

Antique Tractor Pulls (for tractors built prior to 1960) will be conducted Saturday, July 19 at 11 a.m.and continuing throughout the day and evening.

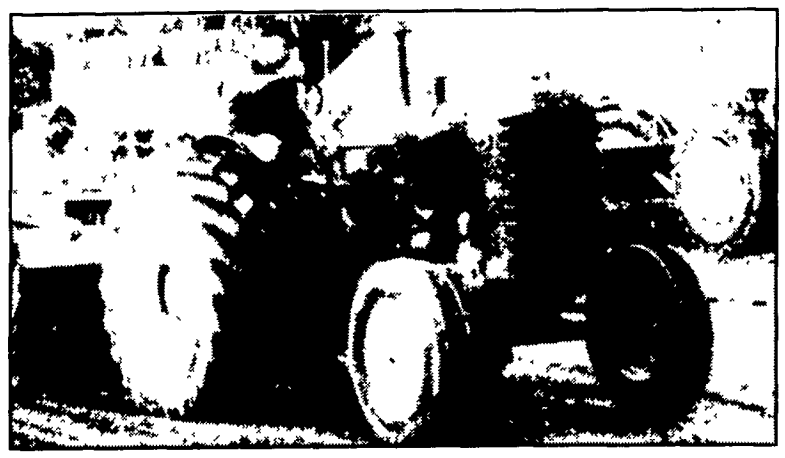
All of the tractor pulls will be conducted in the main arena and will have two sleds running simultaneously. At 7 p.m. on Saturday, there will be a parade of antique farm tractors and equipment. Don't miss the steam engines and their spectacular show during the evening tractor pulls on Friday and Saturday. There will also be a fireworks display on Saturday evening (weather permitting).

Featured, on both days will be antique tractors, cars and stationary engines as well as steam and horse-drawn equipment and demonstrations.

Sunday's activities will include slow tractor races, tractor barrel rolling and other events and demonstrations. Plenty of food will be available both days.

Massey Harris is the featured tractor and we welcome members of the Friends of Massey group at the fair events.

.Contact Don Moore at (410) 620-0275 or Jerry England at (410) 658-3348 for additional information.



Tractor parades and equipment displays are featured at Cecil County Farm Museum Old-Time Farm Days.

Ephrata Cloister Demonstrates Early Book Arts

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — Have you read a good book lately? As you were holding it in your hands, did you think about how the book was made? Today, technology allows major publishers to quickly produce books in great quantities. Two hundred years ago, the task was not as easy.

One of the nation's earliest publishing centers was located at the Ephrata Cloister in northern Lancaster County, where paper and ink were made from scratch, printing type was set by hand, and book binders stitched together the pages and bound them in leather covers. Purchasers could even have their name penned inside the book in the beautiful Germanic calligraphy called Frakturschriften. To discover more about the process used for publishing in the past, the Ephrata Cloister presents the special program "Paper, Ink, Quill, and Press" on Sunday, July 13 from noon to 5 p.m. The day-long demonstrations of papermaking, printing, book binding, and calligraphy are included with admission to the historic site.

"Two hundred and fifty-five years ago Ephrata's members were in the midst of producing the largest book published in the American colonies, and everyone plays some role in the work," said Toni Collins, historic site administrator. The book, the "Martyrs Mirror," tells the stories of early Christian and Anabaptist martyrs, and was produced for the Mennonite congregations in Pennsylvania. The 1,500 page book employed 15 of the Brothers for three years in its production, some in the paper mill, others at the printing press.

Jacobsen Offers New Steiner Zero Turn Mower

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — For rural acreage owners, Jacobsen®, a Textron Company, offers the Steiner® 200 ZTM™, the first zero-turn mower with optional Powerlink™ that generates up to 1000 watts of AC electric power.

The Steiner 200 ZTM is the latest Steiner Zero Turn Mower built using the same rugged, commercial-grade design that made Steiner mowers famous. The 200 ZTM delivers the high quality cut homeowners demand, true zero-turn capability, and premium features at an attractive price.

Steiner 200 ZTM mowers offers farmers and rural acreage owners a choice of 17.5-, 18-, or 25-hp Briggs & Stratton electric start enegines and 48-inch or 52-inch side discharge mowing decks designed to handle tough mowing jobs. Standard features include 23-inch drive tires, a padded, high-back, vinyl covered seat, cup holder, electric ignition and clutch, hydrostatic transmission and 5-gallon fuel tank. In addition, the 25-hp model comes standard with PowerLink an exclusive technology available only on this class of Steiner branded zero-turn mowers (zero-turn allows the machine to pivot through 180 degrees without leaving a circle of uncut grass).

"The Steiner 200 ZTM is an exciting new product for small farm owners," said Tony Weber, product manager, Jacobsen Commercial Grounds Care. "It is designed for the residential market, but includes the commercial quality and attributes from the rest of our product line. And the PowerLink option will provide our customers with the convenience of portable power to run tools, lights, or use as a back-up generator."

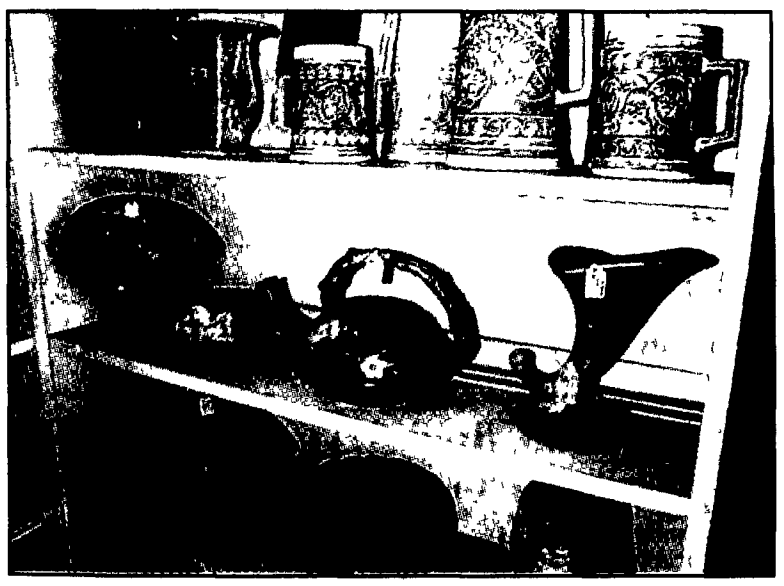
Roseville Pottery Is Specialty At Doug's Antiques

Doug Stuart holds one his prize pieces of Roseville pottery in front of a display.



The teapot with the wooden look handles, center, is very popular in Roseville pottery.

Overall view of the shop.

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent

BEDFORD (Bedford Co.) — Doug Stuart found historic Bedford in the late 1960's. Its tree-lined streets deemed it to be the perfect place for an antique shop.

His own antique collection began 35 years previous to the 1988 purchase of his present store known as Doug's Antiques. In front of his shop on sunny spring, summer, and fall afternoons, you can see Doug sitting in a lawn chair watching the traffic or deeply involved in an antique book.

"I did not get into this business to get rich," he said with a laugh. "But I enjoy having a reason to buy more stuff and I love meeting people."

While he appreciates all types of antiques, his first love is colorful Roseville Pottery.

The Roseville Pottery company was founded by George F. Young in 1892 in Janesville, Ohio, where rich clay deposits made it a natural to form.

The first pieces were sold under the name of "Rozane" or "Rozane Ware." These early pieces resemble the image most modern-day collectors associate with the Roseville look.

Rozane Ware had highly glossed browns and blues, painted animals, Indians, nature scenes, and portraits.

"I love my collection of Roseville," Doug says. "Sometimes it is difficult to part with a piece, but I know I have to in order to make room for more."

Roseville was first sold in dime stores and when sales dwindled during the Great Depression, many of the pieces were taken off the market. Some were kept in stock for six months and then removed from the shelves. No one had extra pennies for decorative pieces.

When the Depression Era passed, Roseville came back on the market and moved up in the world to department stores and finally to more exclusive shops.

The last Roseville pottery was made in 1954.

Doug's shop collection includes a teapot with a wooden-look handle, always an in demand Roseville piece. Roseville made vases, teapots, plant stands, and lamps. The list of patterns and colors is endless.

Other specialties in Doug's shop include a display of Fiestaware and dinnerware by Halls.

Fiestaware, recently revived on the market, was bright and colorful and sold in dime stores. The brightly-colored dishes in blues, oranges, yellows, and greens make attractive displays in country kitchens. Today's version of Fiestaware is pretty, but, according to Doug, is not as colorful.

"The vibrant hues just aren't there," he said.

"Martha Stewart is a huge fan of Fiestaware," he notes. "If you ever watch one of her shows you will see the cupboards in the background are full of these colorful dishes."

Fiestaware pieces were given away as premiums by the Jewel Tea Company. Popular patterns include Red Poppy which was a premium at the A&P; Howard Johnson used a Halls' Simple Simon motif. Halls' had a wide array of patterns including tiny flowers, red poppies, and even plain colors.

In more recent years, Hall's was commissioned to make a teapot in a caricature shape of President Ronald Reagan for a Republican Convention. For whatever reason, the order was cancelled leaving Hall's stuck with 500 teapots. They put them in their outlet store and sold them for $16.95. Today, the same teapot sells for several hundred.

A few pieces of fine Victorian era antique furniture and a collection of Victorian prints by such artists as Currier and Ives, William Nutting, and Addison Fox round out the merchandise in Doug's Shop located at 112 N. Richard Street, Bedford.

Original Fiestaware is bright and colorful.

This antique cupboard is full of Halls' dinnerware, which had often been given away as premiums.

Patent Models
An Inventive Collectible

Looking for something different to collect?

How about a patent model? It isn't every day that there is an opportunity to own an original patent model for an object invented in the 19th century. And, at prices under a thousand dollars. Periodically one or two patent models will show up at auction. However, at the recent James Julia auction over a dozen were offered. The diversified items included a kiln for drying grain, an improved washing machine, (a wooden model patented 1867), and a double action pump. Collectors favor those that have some movement.

Americans were an inventive lot. So much so, that by 1907, the U.S. Patent Office didn't have enough space to either store or display them all. Congress decided to sell them.

The Smithsonian Institution got first choice, and the remainder were sold at auction in 1925. The first major private collection was begun by E. Tunnicliff Fox, who later donated it to the Hagley Museum and library in Wilmington, Delaware, where it can be seen today.

The making of patent models began when Congress passed the Patent Act of 1790 to regulate the process for people interested in getting a patent to protect their inventions.

Along with the three-dimensional example, written specifications and a drawing were required.

After 1880 models were no longer necessary, but some inventors continued to offer them until the end of the 19th century. The Patent numbering system began in 1836. By March, 1991 the number passed the 5,000,000 mark. While many of the inventors have remained largely unknown, one, a woman, Mary P. Carpenter was a prolific inventor in the 1870s. She created items to improve women's tasks. Among her patents were a straw-sewing machine (for sewing straw braid), an ironing and fluting machine, an improved mop ringer and a button and netting canopy for beds.

Antique Detective

Models were built by inventors or by professional model makers, using drawings or specifications.

Not every model was manufactured or sold. Just because a patent was granted didn't mean it was successful. Many were actually impractical and didn't even work.

Fires in 1836 and 1877 destroyed thousands of the models.

Some of the patent model inventions have contemporary applications found in today's spas. One, "Improvement in Electric and Vapor chairs" patented in September 26, 1871 by Mary A. Hayward, was a precursor to our vaporizers. The purpose of the chair was to "apply to the human body, or portions thereof, vapors for opening the pores of the skin, and also to bring liquids into contact with the skin for medical purposes."

Rufus Porter (1792-1884) best known as a traveling folk artist was also a serious inventor. Among his inventions, a fire alarm, a revolving rifle, and an ice-making machine.

His Patent Model for a fire alarm, displayed in the Hagley Museum, has a colorful illustration of a house on fire and his signature. It is called "The Sensitive Fire Alarm" and is a forerunner to our home fire detectors.

Some are downright humorous. One, a cattle pump, would allow cattle to pump their own water by standing on a platform. By the use of cords and pulleys the weight of the animal would bear down on the plunger. Presto! Water!

CLUES: There are many models as yet undiscovered. It is possible to come across one at an estate sale or even a shop. Not everybody recognizes them or appreciates these examples of American ingenuity.

Schaefferstown Museums Offer Pennsylvania German Heritage Programs

SCHAEFFERSTOWN (Lebanon Co.) — A crossroads village, one of the nation's oldest water works, Pennsylvania German heritage and the ties between farm and town are some of the stories that can be found at the Alexander Schaeffer Farm, Brendle Museum, and Gemberling-Rex House in Schaefferstown.

Custom Bale Wrapper Works Overtime In Wet Weather

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

DENVER (Lancaster Co.) — This spring, the old advice "make hay while the sun shines" was just about impossible to follow.

In many areas, including Lancaster County, the persistently rainy weather well into June created a huge challenge for farmers trying to make dry bales.

For those trying to make hay between showers, it sure helped to have a bale wrapper nearby.

Jay Ivan Hoover was prepared to help farmers in the Denver area harvest high-quality forage by offering his services as a custom baler and wrapper.

Jay Ivan, his brothers Merle and David, and father Ivan have been involved in custom work for years, including manure hauling.

Custom haymaking became a bigger focus last year when the Hoovers purchased two major pieces of equipment: a baler for making large square bales, and an in-line bale wrapper.

The baler makes three-by-three-foot bales of adjustable length. Since the wrapper can handle a maximum bale length of six feet, Hoover has been making a lot of six-foot bales for wrapping this spring.

For dry hay, he generally makes eight-foot-long bales.

According to Hoover, hay for wrapping is best baled when moisture content is between 40 and 50 percent.

It isn't always easy to predict how busy he'll be, according to Hoover. During last year's droughty growing season, he baled a total of about 3,500 bales. Already this year, he's harvested more than 2,000 bales. Because of the wet spring, he's working overtime wrapping bales, too.

"It all depends on the weather," Hoover said of the overall demand for his baling and wrapping services.

He generally keeps his customers satisfied by doing the baling and wrapping as timely as possible.

Occasionally it becomes a big challenge, Hoover said, "when they call for rain and everybody wants it wrapped." Then "it's almost impossible to keep everybody happy.

"We try our best," he said, noting he's worked into the wee hours of the morning making hay.

"Some nights I didn't have a night," he said.

A dry eight-foot-long bale weighs 600-800 pounds, Hoover said, while the six-foot-long high-moisture bales for wrapping weigh about 1,500 pounds.

Hoover also wraps bales for farmers who do their own baling. The in-line wrapper can handle either round or square bales.

Advantages of using square bales include easier storage and transport, according to Hoover.

Hoover charges by the bale for wrapping. For baling, he figures in both time and the number of bales. He does custom baling for

Youth Demonstrate Grazing Savvy At Project Grass Contest

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — The most seasoned graziers would be challenged by this contest.

But it was high school students who traveled from all over the state to participate in the first ever Youth Grazing Evaluation Scholarship Contest at Penn State's Haller Farm in State College May 7.

A total of 36 students in 11 teams tested their in-depth, hands-on knowledge of various aspects of grassland management, including plant identification, grassland condition, soil types, and wildlife management.

Questions such as "Does the given system's growth cycle match the seasonal peak nutritional needs of this livestock herd under present management?"; "What is the average growth stage of the dominant forage species?"; and "What change should be made in livestock management?" plumbed the contestants' abilities to assess a plot of pasture.

At the end of the day, a team of 4-H'ers from Cambria County was named the winner of the contest. Each member received $500 college scholarships, and the team received $1,200 toward traveling to Springfield, Mo. to the National Grazing Contest June 8-11.

The team went on to place second in the country in the 4-H division. The team was awarded a plaque, and each individual received a medal. They competed against eight teams from Arkansas, Missouri, and Ohio. A team from Missouri won the 4-H contest.

Genevieve "Genny" Christ, a member of the winning team, was named outstanding individual in the Penn State contest and received an additional $500 scholarship.

Christ, a high school senior this fall in Forest Hills School District, Cambria County, plans to major in environmental sciences at Penn State. She lives with her parents, Eric and Peggy Christ, and two sisters on a beef farm near Sidman.

Lindsey Harteis of Ebensburg; Marcia Itle, Loretto; and Matthew Veneskey of Carrolltown made up the winning team along with Christ. All four plan to pursue agricultural or environmental careers.

The FFA team from Fayette County took second place in the contest. Members Justin Coffman, Mary Fencil, Amanda Summy, and Dustin Swope each received $250 college scholarships for their accomplishments.

The Kutztown FFA team from Berks County place third.

The 50-by-50 foot judging sites for grassland condition and wildlife represented typical pasture areas used for livestock grazing, and included a scenario with landowner's goals for livestock and wildlife management.

In identifying soils, contestants used aerial soil maps to locate the plot and determine soil types.

For the plant identification part of the contest, participants had a total of 20 plants to name, including grasses, legumes, and weed species.

The contest was organized by Pennsylvania Project Grass, the multi-agency grazing promotion partnership that recently expanded to include the whole state.

Well, it seems like it has been a very long time since I sat down to write my column. Many things have happened to me since that time. So as not to bore you with all the details, I will tell you that I suffered a stroke. I have improved dramatically since April 12, the day it took place. The use of my right side has returned as well as my strength. The main things that happened were that I suffered from a loss of balance more than 20 local farmers.

The in-line wrapper makes a good, tight wrap on the bales because the lead roller that spools out the white poly stretch film is running slighter faster that the roller behind it. This pre-stretches the plastic before it is wrapped around the hay by means of two rotating carriers.

A skid loader is used to lift bales into the wrapper. The whole machine inches forward as it wraps and deposits finished bales on the ground.

With remote control, Hoover can run the whole operation by himself.

While the manufacturer recommends setting the machine speed so that each bale is wrapped in four layers of plastic, Hoover said he thinks that is "a little thin." He prefers eight to nine layers to keep any livestock, rodents, birds, or weather from breaking through the plastic.

Glenn Wenger and his son, Burnell, recently had Hoover wrap some alfalfa for them on their dairy farm near Ephrata. It was the second year the Wengers made use of the wrapper. Wenger said he was pleased with the quality of last year's baleage when it came time to feed it.

Hoover's ingenious wrapping machine was made in Ontario, Canada. Wrapping technology is becoming a much more common sight in the area.

"It's something you didn't see five years ago," Hoover said.

and a paralyzed vocal cord. I am doing physical and speech therapy to improve both of these losses and I am pleased to report that my balance control has improved substantially. However, my vocal cord has a long way to go, but I'm getting there.

Now, to report on Project Grass's Grassland Evaluation Contest. The Cambria County team was the first place winner and represented Pennsylvania at the Mid-America Contest in Missouri. I am so pleased to report that the team placed eighth overall out of 19 teams from all over the country. Of the nine 4-H teams competing, they placed second. This is a fantastic showing for Pennsylvania's first year. I would like to say thank you to all the team members for their hard work in preparing for the contest and congratulations for a job well done. I would also like to say thank you to those conservation professionals responsible for Pennsylvania's contest (particularly NRCS conservationist Bobbi Bailey—and our NRCS Project Grass coordinators) and those who helped the teams prepare for competition. They are helping to prepare Pennsylvania's future graziers.

The sunshine was so wonderful on the day of this writing. It makes all those days of rain and no sunshine seem far away. But we know they are not. I have spoken to a few folks who were complaining about the weather because they did not know how they were going to get baleage made, let alone hay. I also talked to some people who were not complaining about the rain because they remembered last year's drought. These folks were basically graziers. They were not relying on the sun to dry or wilt forages. They were using their "four-legged" mowing machines to harvest their forages. That's right, their livestock were able to consume the wet forage even in the rain.

When you think about it, there are several reasons that grazing has advantages over mechanical harvesting and feeding stored forages. Several are very obvious but I will list them anyway. I already listed the first reason which is that regardless of the weather, livestock can harvest the forages. The second reason is a matter of economics. We make more money on livestock products because we have lowered our feed costs, thereby increasing the bottomline. The third reason is lower machinery needs because of less planting or harvesting and all the associated costs. The fourth reason is that livestock help to spread their own manure which reduces hauling and storage costs as well as provides environmental benefits. The fifth reason is a better personal and family life with less stress and more enjoyment.

Let's first discuss the weather concern and the fact the forage harvest is not overly affected by it. Livestock will not destroy a pasture that is soaked and soggy because of a lot of rain if they are only allowed to have a very short grazing period. You give them a small plot that will meet their nutritional needs for just a few hours. A pasture is generally ruined if animals are allowed to camp in field for a longer period of time. They can also find stockpiled forage under the snow. When the hay fields only grow six inches or so because of the lack of rain, it is almost impossible to mechanically harvest, but livestock can easily graze. Therefore, it is important to install the perimeter fence around the farm so all the fields may be grazed. This is especially true in dry periods as long as you consider heat stress. Ideal weather affords the best grazing time and also benefits crop growing. We must consider how much ideal weather we do enjoy and remember that if we do not have it, the livestock will harvest the forages anyway through grazing.

The second reason we listed was increasing the bottom line. You can imagine that through the livestocks' grazing and keeping the tractor parked that feed costs are reduced. When we put fewer acres under annual crop production, we are saving money. The forage crop is planted for many years of harvest and the cost of establishment is spread out over several years. Excess forages are harvested for winter-feed. Grazing reduces veterinarian costs and utility costs. In general grazing reduces input costs thereby increasing profits.

Grazing improves the lifestyle of the producer. This is a very intangible factor but is very important. The reduction of stress can improve the grazier's family and personal daily life. He/she gets more time to enjoy the family and to do off-the-farm activities. By reducing overall stress, there is a tendency for younger family members to remain on the farm.

Bale Wrapper Technology In Use On Plain Dairy

ELIZABETHTOWN (Lancaster Co.) — Plain dairy farmers have been making use of special bale wrapper technology that aids in the fermentation process for silage.

An Amish farmer from Honey Brook spoke about his operation during a special Lancaster County pasture walk at the Garber Dairy Farm in Elizabethtown in May.

The Honey Brook farmer manages about 70 acres, all Holsteins. He uses a sicklebar mower.

Using a regular baler, about 16 bales are compressed and wrapped. A cylinder press compresses them and a device wraps them in thick plastic.

"The cows have been eating (the baleage). It feeds nice," he said.

The bales are compressed and wrapped when they are fairly dry. They cannot be wrapped too wet, noted the dairyman.

The Amish farmer is a member of DFA. He cares for about 40 milk cows and is not on DHIA.

PFGC ♦ PRESIDENT'S CORNER ♦

Tim Fritz
PFGC President

The weather certainly has been a challenge lately. The summer of 2002 was hot and bone dry. The fall of 2002 was wet and cold. Winter lasted too long and this spring was cool, wet and that yellow thing in the sky was absent most of the spring. Summer has started warm and sunny but who knows what the rest of the year will bring.

It is very obvious to me that a diversity of forages with flexible harvesting systems are needed. This spring dry hay was impossible to make, baleage and haylage were difficult, and grazing required excellent management including improved lanes. Irish weather required Irish forage harvesting. I visited a farm on a pasture walk in Maryland that for their surplus spring growth was using the Irish system of direct-cut silage in which the forage (ryegrass in this case) was flail-chopped, stacked on a pile, covered with plastic, and the air vacuumed out.

Hopefully, this weather will not be repeated soon but some lessons should be learned. Don't put all your forages in one system. Flexibility and diversity of species are critical to maintain a supply of high quality forages. Last summer BMR (brown midrib) sorghum sudangrass and forage sorghum shone, and this spring ryegrass did very well after a rough start.

Most people already know how to make high quality hay and haylage. The bugs are being worked out of balage especially with the advent of inline wrappers. The Irish direct-cut system is usually not needed but is worth exploring. Grazing is in its early stages of adoption and, with low commodity prices, needs to incorporated into mainstream agriculture for eastern agriculture to thrive.

With good management grazing can be a very profitable way to make milk and meat! The stored forage systems are needed to help manage surpluses and shortages of forages. If you are ready to join in the grazing game, learn from others' mistakes and do some research before you jump into grazing. The learning curve is steep, but for most folks it is very enjoyable. But don't think you will be laying around watching the cows (or other grazing livestock) do all the work for you! This system requires management and is a skill that may be essential for financial survival. The remainder of my comments will focus on grazing systems and in particular as it relates to dairy. But the ideas are relevant for other animal species as well.

While grazing, the cows are working for you in harvesting forages at their prime. You are the boss sending your workers to harvest the crop. The trick is to keep the workers busy as much as possible in the right field. In other words, the crop should be at its prime most of the time and there should be enough of crop available for the cow to harvest. It really isn't that hard to do, and when you fall short you can always feed a little stored feed. Isn't that what stored feed was invented for? Also when you don't have enough cow workers to harvest the forage, bring out the machines to get it harvested in a timely fashion. Mistakes will be made, but thankfully pastures are very forgiving. After a few cycles of grazing you and your cows will catch on.

Grazing works for one simple reason: cows, as ruminants, are made to be on grass. Their four stomachs are naturally adapted to forage consumption, not heavy amounts of grain which is often fed on many farms. You, the boss must be like a good shepherd and put the cows (or sheep in the case of the shepherd) on good pasture. When the system is running efficiently, the financial benefits come from several factors:

- Less capital overhead;
- Low cull rates/more cattle sales;
- More milk sold per farm worker; and
- Lower feed costs through premium forage quality.

Here are the key components for making the system work: the Fence, the Lanes, the Water System, the Crop, the Land Base, the Cows, and the Manager.

The Fence is essential for making managed grazing work. Its primary purpose on a managed system is to keep the cows out of the Crop which has not reached its optimum harvest stage. Cows should not be on paddocks longer than three days or new shoots may be grazed off weakening the plant and resulting in lower yields. Ideally, a new break (additional fresh pasture) should be given two to three times a day for intensively managed pastures. For most dairies, single strand fencing is all you need. A rule of thumb for paddock size (area where cows are grazing) is 40,000-80,000 pounds of animal per day per acre depending on pasture density and supplemental feeding levels.

The Lane is essential for getting the herd to the right paddock without destroying too much pasture. Heavily used lanes should be improved to move cows to and from paddocks during marginal weather conditions. Improved lanes range from simple crowning of dirt all the way to a narrow strip of concrete. But don't spend too much money up front until you know where the problems will be and that you are committed to making the system work. Because lanes will not grow a crop, I prefer lanes that are narrow. Equipment lanes ideally should be kept separate. Fences making up the lanes should be designed for flexibility of cow movement and equipment crossing (easily dropped or moved.)

> "Grazing is very similar to the game of chess. A lot of moves must be made to succeed, but there are many ways to succeed."
> Tim Fritz
> PFGC Pesident

The Water System: Cows obviously need clean fresh water to produce milk. However, this component is a little controversial. Since lush grass contains about 80 percent water less water is needed for a grazing herd than a herd consuming drier rations. Most recommend a pressurized water system that relies on above ground 160-psi black plastic piping that follows the lane system to carry water to each paddock. Ideally, it is looped with individual legs going to remote paddocks. Portable tubs with full flow valves are connected by couplers and are moved to wherever the herd is moved. In addition to water in each paddock, lots of water should be available when the herd comes in from pasture. Cows drink most of their water at this time. For large herds, water storage tanks are very important.

The Crop is essential for providing high quality forage to the cow. Some folks in the grazing world simply recommend planting fence posts and let the cows harvest whatever comes. Most, however, have figured out that you reap what you sow. This is not to say that native pastures can not be productive with good management. I rarely recommend that old pastures be plowed under for a startup operation. Only after the full system is up and running and the old pasture falls short in some way should renovation take place. A balanced cropping program can help keep your paddocks producing a crop most of the year. Any field that the herd can walk to within a mile should be considered for grazing.

The backbone crop for pasture systems is cool season grasses mixed with clovers. I personally prefer the perennial ryegrass, orchardgrass, and clover mixtures as the base program. Perennial ryegrass is fast-establishing and its quality is great. However, it falls short on summer productivity during dry hotter weather. Orchardgrass is long lived if managed properly and takes the extremes better. The clovers add quality, nitrogen fixation, and summer yields. The forage species need to fit your situation, however, as your soils and management may be suited to other species.

To supplement the summer slump and renovate worn pasture, consider planting warm season annuals such as BMR (brown midrib) sorghum sudans. A basic guide for the first time you grow this crop is: don't put out more than one acre for every 10 cows unless you are prepared to make stored forage.

Winter active crops such as Italian ryegrass, annual ryegrass, and small grains can also be used to stretch the grazing months. They can also be easily double-cropped with the warm season annuals.

The Land Base is critical for making the system work. If too little pasture is available and the paddocks are abused, than it may be better to keep the cows in the barn and bring the feed to the cows. An adequate Land Base also depends on management. If cows are only turned out six to 10 hours a day and fed lots in the barn, you may get by with as little as ¼ acres per cow. If you plan to turn the cows out most of the day, ½ to a little over 1 acre per cow is needed depending on how much stored forage is fed.

Soil type, drainage, and fertility can also affect the Land Base required. High-producing pastures require good soil fertility. Good grazing management in combination with a soil program will increase soil organic matter which improves dry weather productivity and decreases wet weather damage. Stocking rates can be increased, or supplemental feeding decreased, as soil productivity increases.

The Cow obviously is critical to grazing. Remember she is the worker and you are the boss sending her to the right fields with lots of high quality forage for her to turn into milk. A good grazing cow is a mobile eating machine. She requires good feet and legs since she is required to walk as far as a mile to paddocks and, during the act of grazing, she is walking slowly, swinging her head back and forth. Probably the ideal grazing cow is around 1,000 pounds in weight. Big cows tend not to do as well. Jerseys and Jersey crosses perform well but there are many other breeds that have potential, including the cows in your own herd. Holsteins can also be very good grazers, but hot weather is not their strong point and there is a higher percentage of what I call "TMR queens" in most Holstein herds. Over time cows that are not good grazers will be culled out of the system.

The Manager: You hold the keys to success. Learn about the system before leaping by attending pasture walks, meetings, reading grazing papers such as Graze, and learning from successful neighbors. But just like swimming, eventually you have to jump in and really find out for yourself. There are a growing number of support people in the universities, governmental organizations, and private industry that have solid experience. Use them and experienced graziers to your benefit. You don't have to learn everything the hard way. Grazing requires daily management and flexible forward planning. Instead of chasing The Crop to the cows your are chasing the cows to The Crop. A successful manager is planning forward for today, tomorrow, next week, next month, next year and beyond. Grazing is very similar to the game of chess. A lot of moves must be made to succeed, but there are many ways to succeed.

The success of a grazing system is up to the manager to make it happen. For many it is an enjoyable way of farming. Research it and give it a try. You may enjoy putting the pieces of the puzzle together and the daily game of grazing chess. It does not cost much to try, and if you don't like it move on to something else. If you are just starting, remember that livestock makes the money — not barns, silos, and equipment. Keep these costs as low as possible. But don't shoot yourself in the foot by cutting out profit makers.

The Most Powerful Blower Made In Stock At Binkley & Hurst Bros., Inc. - 1000 RPM Model 1580 Gehl - Get One Today!

Choose The Gehl Blower That's Right For You

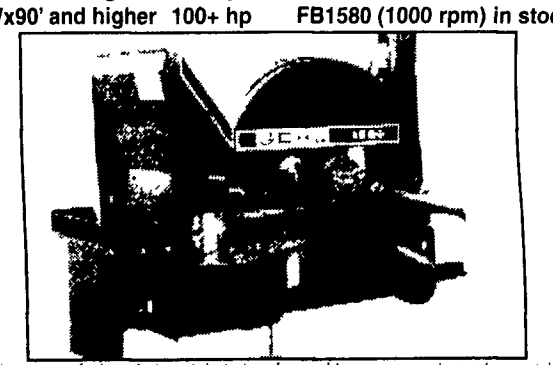
With three models it's easy to match a high-capacity Gehl blower to your operation In side by side tests at a 100 silo, Gehl blowers out-performed the best the competition had to offer, with the Model 1580 cleaning out an 18' self-unloading box full of haylage 18% faster than the closest competitive blower and 25% faster than one of the so called 'leaders"

Gehl s secret is the twin spinner delivery system and the twin-sided fan Two 24-inch spinners rifle your crop into the blower fan at nearly 35 mph There, the twin-sided fan, with paddles on each side, blows the material up the pipe with ease it's almost like getting the performance of two blowers in one

Gehl blowers are also loaded with on convenience features you re sure to appreciate

As a guideline, we recommend the following

Silo size	HP required	Gehl Model
20'Wx60'-70' high	70 hp	FB1540
25'Wx90' and higher	100+ hp	FB1580 (1000 rpm) in stock



The three main factors that contribute to a forage blower s capacity are tip speed hopper capabilities and available horsepower Generally speaking for optimum capacity the blower requires at least one horsepower for each foot the material must be blown

For instance, a blower on a 20-foot diameter by 60 foot-center silo would require 70-plus horsepower On a 25 foot-diameter by 90 foot center fill silo you should have 100 plus horsepower

Horsepower requirements can be reduced with smoother unloading forage boxes and a wider gooseneck at the top of the silo

4x5 WET HAY BALER MODEL RB 2580 ROUND BALERS

Featuring the ALL-NEW Variable Open-Throat Power In-Feed System

GREAT BALING STARTS HERE

Variable Open-Throat Power In-Feed System Here's how it works The incoming crop is pulled off the pickup by the aggressive action of two power in-feed rolls – a 6-inch-diameter pivoting power in feed roll on top and and 8-inch diameter fixed power in-feed roll on the bottom

The top pivoting power in-feed roll rides over the crop as it is pulled into the bale chamber An extension spring keeps the toproll under constant downward force

The spring tension increases as the variable throat opens from a minimum of 3/4 of an inch up to a maximum opening of nearly 7 inches The constant downward force of the pivoting upper powered in-feed roll in combination with the fixed lower in-feed roll, both turning inward pinches the crop and forces it into the bale chamber The stripping roll strips crop off the belt and forces it down to the incoming crop Adjustable scrapers on the stripping roll and pivoting roll eliminate buildup One Only

Wood Chips Provide Durability To Laneways

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

ELIZABETHTOWN (Lancaster Co.) — Dairyman Mark Garber was quick to make these "observations of success" for dairy graziers: "High seeding rates, good laneways, and narrow lanes," he said.

Mark Garber, in center with umbrella, spoke about laneways during a steady rain at a pasture walk at his Elizabethtown dairy farm.

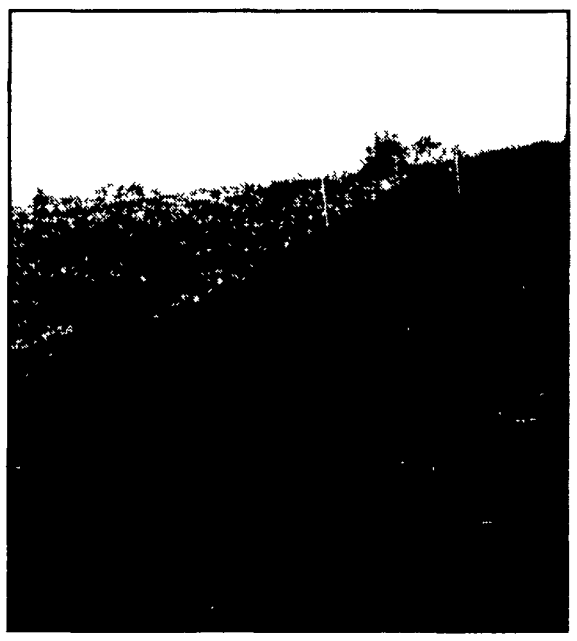
Apparently, good laneway planning and construction make up about two-thirds of the keys to success.

A pasture walk in late May this year was sponsored by Penn State and industry and featured a tour of the Garber Farm. Herbert and Sharon Garber manage the farm with their sons, Mark and Joel. Mark also farms along with Tricia and Joel with Kelly.

Mark noted the ease with which working with narrow lanes saves on construction costs and overall management.

Garber uses a geotextile fabric to improve maintenance and drainability. The temporary lanes in between paddocks are first laid out. A geotextile fabric is laid down, followed by a thin layer of 2A modified stone, and finished off with 3-4 inches of chipped wood.

A more permanent laneway occupies the space between the barn and the milking parlor. The first layer uses heavy 3-4 inch stone, followed by 2A modified. A final layer of crushed stone dust is applied, which hardens with pressure and rain.



Wood chips provide a great top cover that is durable, with plenty of moisture dispersion at the Garber Dairy Farm in Elizabethtown.

Photos by Andy Andrews, editor

A permanent laneway between the Garber Farm barn and milking parlor is constructed with 3-4 inch stone, followed by 2A modified stone, and filled with a crushed stone dust.

For the temporary lanes, using shredded wood, or bark, provides an inexpensive, relatively long-lasting, comfortable, and easily drained top layer that can take a beating.

A key to drainage is the 8-foot wide geotextile fabric, rolled out in the lanes. The material is available from various manufacturers but costs about $150 per 300-foot roll.

The fabric, however, will get "pugged up," noted Garber. Once it is worn and torn, "that's the end of it," he said.

The key is to make sure the wood cutting covering isn't too deep. Fortunately, the Garbers have a nearby source for the material.

PFGC Offers Grants

The PFGC is offering grants for those that would like to try new forage demonstrations or small research trials on their farm. This grant process will be open twice each year.

All cooperators need to be members of the PFGC.

The grant results or farm demonstration are to be reported in the PFGC newsletter at the end of each year. Applications should be sent to J. Craig Williams, fax (570) 724-9120, or e-mail jcw17@psu.edu.

All grants will be a maximum of $250 (four per year.) Grants will be evaluated on their merit of this demonstration/ research being used by other farms, the similarity to the goals of the PFGC, and cooperation of several farms working together.

Grant applications are due March 15 and August 15 of each year.

To apply, send Williams the following information: title of project, sponsors, name, address, county, telephone number, fax number, e-mail address farm cooperators, and funding request. Describe the following about the project:

- Objective or Goal. What research question or problem do you want to answer, or what innovation do you want to demonstrate?;
- Why is this an important issue to address about Pennsylvania forage use?;
- Describe what you intend to do and how you will do it;
- What results do you hope to achieve? How will you measure the results?;
- Name project coordinator and other participants; and
- How will PFGC be promoted through the project?

Local Grazier Places Second In National Contest

LAFAYETTE, La. — Arden Landis, left, took second place in the National Forage Spokesperson Contest at the American Forage and Grassland Council (AFGC) annual meeting in April. Ed Twidwell, contest chairman, presented the award.

This year's conference took place in Lafayette, La. Landis was the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council representative, competing against contestants from Louisiana, Kentucky, Minnesota, Indiana, and Virginia.

Each contestant spoke for 12-15 minutes about their operation. Following the presentation there was a three-minute question and answer period.

Landis, of Kirkwood in Lancaster County, used a slide presentation titled "A Break from Tradition ... A Grass-Based Dairy." He spoke about the transition of his dairy operation from the traditional dairy to a grass-based dairy and how the switch has influenced his operation and his lifestyle for his family.

Landis received a $400 cash prize from ABI Alfalfa and $750 from the PFGC toward expenses for the trip to Lousiana. Arden's wife Caroline accompanied him to Louisiana.

N.Y./Pa. Baleage Meeting A Success

LINDLEY, N.Y. — More than 50 beef producers were on hand to watch Al and Bill Cisco demonstrate their round baler, rake, and two types of bale wrappers at a recent baleage workshop put on by Penn State and Cornell cooperative extensions at the farm of Al and Emmagene Cisco.

Producers learned the pros and cons of using a 3-point hitch wrapper versus an in-line wrapper; how to make good, solid bales with a round baler; and witnessed a double rake that forms windrows the same width as the baler pickup.

Bill and Al ended their demonstrations by taking questions from the crowd on making baleage for beef cattle.

Penn State agents J. Craig Williams and Earle Robbins along with Cornell agents Jim Grace and Kerri Bartlett also discussed the importance of moisture content in making good baleage by demonstrating how to take moisture tests.

Pictured here is the Ciscos' in-line wrapper in action.

The McCormick L100 loader specifically designed for the GX/GXH series of McCormick tractors.

McCormick Introduces Loader For Under 50HP Tractors

PELLA, Iowa — McCormick International USA, has introduced the all new L100 loader specifically designed for the GX/GXH series of McCormick tractors.

The L100 loader is built to accommodate the demanding needs of landscape, grounds care, maintenance and acreage applications by delivering years of performance and outstanding reliability at a competitive price.

"With numerous features like a four-point mounting system, wrap around sub-frame, two-function hydraulic joystick and quick coupling. The L100 loader is built for hard working conditions with operator ease in mind," said Chad Huyser, marketing manager for McCormick.

A conventional four-point mounting system, with two rear main boots and two front hooks, includes a wrap around sub-frame to provide a very tight and secure attachment of the loader to the tractor. The L100 mounting kit is designed to minimize stress on the tractor frame and includes support arms to the rear axle, full length side rails with cross members for outstanding strength and durability.

In the months to come, McCormick expects to introduce several other series of tractors and attachments, with a variety of horsepower ranges and uses.

WEST BEND, Wis. — Gehl Company offers Quickwrap™ Net Wrap as an option on Gehl 80 Series "Deluxe" and "Silage" balers, all featuring the exclusive variable open-throat power in-feed system.

The Quickwrap Net Wrap attachment provides faster bale wrapping cycles and reduces feed loss because of spoilage. Gehl Company offers five models of round balers in standard, deluxe, and silage special configurations. The available bale sizes are 4-feet × 5-feet, 4-feet × 6-feet, 5-feet × 5-feet, and 5-feet × 6-feet. All models deliver high-speed starts, fast ground speeds, increased capacity, and easy operation.

FENDT Introduces 160 HP Tractor

ATLANTA, Ga. — Progressive farmers get high-power, tight turning radius and award-winning control in one tractor with the 160 PTO hp FENDT 818 VARIO.

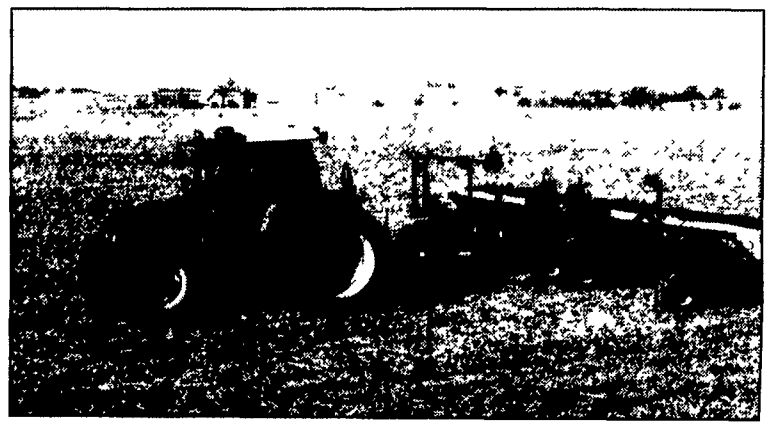
The 818 VARIO combines the engine and hydraulic performance of the high power 900 Series tractors with the maneuverability of the FENDT 700 Series tractors.

The award winning VARIO TMS electronic engine and transmission control and VARIOtronic™ push-button procedure recall increases productivity and profitability while lowering operating costs.

"This 160 hp tractor is designed for increased productivity," said Kevin Bien, FENDT marketing manager. "It brings a level of control and efficiency previously not available to tractors in this size and power range."

The brain center of the 818 VARIO is the TMS tractor management system. The VARIO TMS provides simultaneous electronic control of the engine and transmission through the multi-function joystick or the foot pedal.

With TMS active, the operator can use either controller to bring the tractor to optimum speed and RPM. At that point, the TMS evaluates the load and optimizes engine and transmission operation to meet power requirements and ground speed.



The FENDT 818 VARIO delivers high power, tight turning radius and award winning push button control in a 160 HP package.

The operator also has the option of using the foot pedal and joystick without TMS control.

COLUMBUS, Ind. — Claas of America has announced the redesign of the Claas 15' RU 450 and the 20' RU 600 independent row corn heads for Claas self-propelled Jaguar® Forage Harvesters.

Now equipped with new shielding, the RU corn heads are easy to maintain and deliver a clean look and long life.

New fingers provide safe transport of the stems. The fingers effectively prevent the risk of double cutting and plant loss and give an optimal header feed in different row widths.

The rotor gearboxes in the corn heads now have new bi-directional clutches. This means that the clutch can work in both forward and reversing operations. Each disc has its own clutch. The ear catcher rings above the outer feeder discs are fixed with screws and are now easy to remove in down corn. They are similar to the ear catcher of the middle unit.

Claas' independent row corn heads are designed for use with the Jaguar Forage Harvesters and adapt to irregular field shapes and different row spacing.

Claas of America's Redesigned Corn Head.

Pennsylvania Fair Marred By 11 Days Of Rain

BENSALEM (Bucks Co.) — The 17th Annual Pennsylvania Fair took place in late May in Bensalem with the lowest attendance ever because of the rainy weather. It rained eleven of the twelve days of the fair.

About 200 exhibitors participated in the fair. Meeting the state guidelines of twelve departments, the fair paid out premiums of over $15,000.

Best of Show winners were: 4-H/FFA — Becky Llewellyn, Horsham; Grain and Hay — Les Lazarus, Breinigsville; Vegetables — Lance Lazarus, Breinigsville; Edible Nuts, Fruits, and Berries — Les Lazarus, Breinigsville; Baked Goods — Darlene Mumbauer, Philadelphia; Preserved Foods — Pearl Ward, Hulmeville; Horticulture — Lorissa Lazarus, Breinigsville; Needlecraft — Darlene Mumbauer, Philadelphia; Arts, Photos, and Crafts — Carl Langner, Bradford; Wine and Spirits — Gene Wawrzyniak, Feasterville; and Apiary Products — Stewart Mathias, Hummelstown.

The sheep show was conducted the last weekend with 208 sheep exhibited in the open class. The 4-H Sheep Show also had great participation. The goat show took place during the first weekend and was also well attended. Below are listed the winners in both shows.

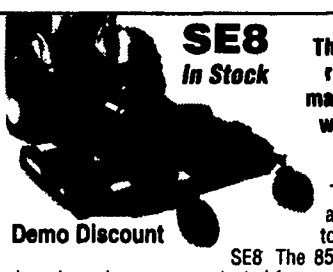
SE8 In Stock



Demo Discount

The Rhino® SE8 is an economical rotary mower designed to help maintain larger acreages of grass, weeds, stalks, or material up to 1" in diameter.

The streamlined, close-coupled design allows economical operation on tractors as small as 30 horsepower on the SE8 The 85 HP center gearbox and 60 HP outboard gearboxes are protected from sudden shockloads by a slip clutch on the main driveline and torque dampeners on the side driveshafts Pan blade carriers help the unit glide over field obstacles and updraft blades with a 4" blade overlap provide a clean cut

DITCHBANK MOWER

DB150. Over 30 years of hydraulic mower design experience has made the Rhino® DB150 the preferred choice of experienced operators for the mowing of pond banks, levees drainage ditches and hard-to-reach areas

The DB150 can extend to a maximum of 158' from the center line of the tractor allowing the 60 inch rotary head to cut areas that are difficult or impossible to reach with ordinary mowers By being hydraulically driven maintenance is greatly reduced with the absence of belts and pulleys The DB150 outperforms many competitive units with smaller hydraulic systems The DB150 utilizes a 60 gallon hydraulic system which allows the unit to run cooler in tough mowing conditions The large reservoir also serves as a counterweight and remains stationary on the mainframe eliminating the potential traffic hazard of a movable counter-balance weight The DB150 features a heavy-duty three-point hitch using a lower double lug hitch system to fit a wide range of tractors To help insure a clean cut, the DB150 features updraft blades and a blade tip speed of 20,028 FPM

NOW IS A GREAT TIME TO TRIM BACK THOSE FENCE LINES WITH A RHINO BOOM MOWER

The Servis® 1548 hydraulic boom flail cutters are designed for mowing grass and cutting brush in hard-to-reach areas including roadsides, ditchbanks, ponds, and fence rows Large model with up to 15 foot horizontal reach and up to 4" diameter brush cutting

For your safety, always wear a helmet, eye protection and protective clothing. Always avoid paved surfaces. Never ride on public roads. Never carry passengers or engage in stunt riding. Fewer parts, fewer problems, less downtime, more productivity. What could be simpler than that? The all-new MF 9000 Series Class VI and VII combines are so advanced, they're simple. In fact, there are only nine main machine drive belts, three drive chains and 66% fewer grease fittings than competitive combines. That means less time maintaining the machine, more time harvesting your crop. There's more. More header choices than anyone in the industry, and more in-cab visibility and comfort to watch 'em work. See your Massey Ferguson Dealer today and ask about all the great features on the new MF 9000 combines.

KEEPS YOU HARVESTING THE CROP.

SQUEALERS MOW DOWN THE COMPETITION.

There are two basic reasons and quality is the first. Each Squealer model is equipped with a tough Bush Hog gearbox that carries a 2-year warranty.

The second reason for the Squealer's popularity is price. Select any of the five models, 42 to 84-inches wide, and compare prices with the competition. With a true price and quality comparison, it's easy to see why Squealers mow down the competition.

Fish Oil May Help Young Pigs

COLUMBIA, Mo. — Consuming fish such as salmon and tuna, which contain omega-3 fatty acids, appears to lower the risk of cholesterol and heart disease in humans. Now Agricultural Research Service (ARS) scientists are finding that fish oil also can improve the health of swine.

ARS animal physiologist Jeff Carroll evaluated the use of omega-3 fatty acids in young, weaned pigs as a better means of developing their immune systems and thus helping the animals fight deadly diseases. At the ARS Animal Physiology Research Unit in Columbia, Mo., Carroll fed one group of 18-day-old pigs a traditional diet that included seven percent corn oil. The other group received 7 percent menhaden fish oil, which — like tuna and salmon — contains high levels of omega-3 fatty acids.

After 14 days of feeding, the pigs were immunologically challenged with an endotoxin. Tests showed that the pigs given the fish oil were eating more feed after the challenge and that the fish oil helped them better prepare to fight the toxin.

Carroll has performed other research using different concentrations of fish oil. Each study showed that the fish oil diet was better than the control diet at helping build up the pigs' immune systems. The omega-3 fatty acids are absorbed through the intestine and help the immune cells cope with disease.

In the United States, pigs usually get some antibiotics in their feed, but other countries may phase out this procedure. Adding fish oil should help U.S. producers if they are required to eliminate antibiotics in the pigs' diet. In addition, fish oil will probably be less expensive than antibiotics.

Fluff 3 windrows in one pass

You'll cover acres fast, and bale or chop sooner with the Model 169 tedder. It uses six rotors to ted a wide 22'8" area. That's wide enough to fluff three windrows from a 9' mower-conditioner. Yet transport width is a narrow 9'8" for easy maneuvering. The frame of the "169" is fully articulated, so it hugs the ground to fluff all of your crop for fast drying. And the Digidrive® coupling provides smooth, reliable operation.

Beat the weather with the Model 169.

Purina EXT Nuggets Turn Conception Rates Around At Woodedge Farm

Rod Kauffman, right, has seen his herd double its conception rates over the past year on Purina EXT. Joining Kauffman is Purina representative Gerald Burket.

Two years ago, Rod Kauffman was having a lot of trouble breeding cows in his Holstein herd at Woodedge Farm.

He tried to remedy the problem by switching to a new feed company to provide better energy supplements. But nine months later, the herd's reproductive performance was still poor.

Startena gets calves off to a good start on Woodedge Farm.

It wasn't until Kauffman switched to Purina EXT Nuggets a year ago that the conception rates began to turn around. Now they stand at roughly double last year's level.

"Conception rates have really improved a lot," said Kauffman, pointing out DHIA figures for overall success rate of 15–20 percent a year ago compared to 35–40 percent today.

Kauffman manages a 65-cow tiestall operation near Reedsville, Mifflin County, along with his wife Gloria and children, Dustin, 15; Ashlee, 13; and Eric, 11. They grow their own alfalfa and high moisture corn on the 115-acre home farm.

Kauffman and his father Leroy have long relied on Purina Nurse Grow 100 milk replacer and Startena to grow healthy calves. Now, they are also sold on the EXT nugget concentrate to give their cows the energy they need to be bred back in a timely manner.

"EXT is an extremely high-energy product," said Gerald Burket, dairy specialist and the Kauffman's Purina representative. "The nuggets have been tremendous."

In addition to the boost in reproductive performance, the Kauffman's herd has also seen an increase in production with Purina. April herd average this year is 25,600 pounds of milk, 916 of fat, and 773 of protein. April a year ago, the average stood at 23,455 of milk.

Kauffman is pleased with the service he gets from Burket, who visits the farm every other week to balance the rations.

Both of them—farmer and feedman—keep a real close eye on dry matter intake, Burket said.

With a Purina program in place for the milking cows, the Kauffmans have had their confidence restored in the Woodedge herd, which boasts five 88-point cows in the barn today. Two of them are granddaughters of the late Woodedge Mark Pasta, an Excellent-91 5E matriarch bred on the farm.

The Kauffman's management program includes a focus on longevity, foot and leg health, and cow comfort. Evidence is provided by a number of aged cows in the herd, including one 11-year-old.

At the Kauffman's, Purina is clearly a key part of overall good management.
